GREETINGS FROM THE NCPH PRESIDENT

Kristine Navarro-McElhane
President, National Council on Public History kristine.navarromcelhane@austin.utexas.edu

Welcome to the beautiful city of Atlanta and NCPH 2023!

This year's conference, To Be Determined (TBD), is very special for NCPH members, our colleagues and collaborators, and the history community. There is something extraordinary about meeting in person, and as we reconvene for the first time in four years, there is much to acknowledge, people to reconnect with, and conversations to be restarted.

I first want to thank our amazing staff; Program and Local Arrangements Committee co-chairs; and volunteers for their tireless work to ensure that NCPH 2023 will be a defining event for our members, our organization, and our field. Putting on a conference of this magnitude is no small task, and we are privileged to have such a committed and capable team!

Although COVID-19 posed (and continues to pose) many challenges, our resiliency over the course of the pandemic introduced us to new ways of doing things and new ways to connect with each other, bringing new approaches and methodologies that have the potential to transform how we approach public history. In short, the critical work, investment, and engagement in public history did not stop—we adjusted to new realities.

The pandemic also laid bare inequities that have long plagued our field and the organizations within it and clarified for us our role in combating them. We've made some adjustments and accommodations to create a more equitable conference, including lower registration rates for un- and under-employed public historians, funding for local grassroots public history work, and a virtual conference (coming in Fall 2023) for those who cannot join us in Georgia.

For those who can join us, we're offering an exciting and enriching slate of sessions and events that reflect the conversations going on in public history that will help us chart our journey forward. As befits a conference in Atlanta, and particularly necessary at a time when Black history work in the public sphere is challenged and in danger of erasure, we'll spend our time in many sessions highlighting techniques public historians are using to tell more complete and complex stories of Black lives. We'll visit the Atlanta History Center and learn about the comprehensive changes they're making in their exhibits, new and permanent alike, to tackle Lost Cause mythologies head-on. We'll hear from American Revolution-era scholars about the language of freedom and enslavement, and learn from and with the interpreters who talk to the public about racial inequality and violence every day.

This year's program also features twelve working groups and more participation than ever in the working group format. This reflects the Program Committee co-chairs' desire to gather us together for several days of celebration, fun, and the kind of collaborative work that refuels us. While these groups have been meeting virtually since November, attendees are encouraged to sit in on their sessions to see the shape that work is taking. I also hope you'll participate in Thursday afternoon's activation with the team from The Inclusion (<https://inclusion.com/>), where we'll use techniques from their book Transforming Inclusion in Museums (2022) to envision the future of public history and join together to make "good trouble."

With gratitude,

KNM

NCPH EVENTS CODE OF CONDUCT

The National Council on Public History (NCPH), in keeping with the core principles outlined in its mission statement and Code of Ethics and Professional Conduct, is committed to providing a welcoming and harassment-free space for its members and others who attend, participate in, and support NCPH conferences, events, meetings, and online programming.

As public historians, our membership is committed to exploring diverse historical narratives and developing practices that embrace stories, individuals, and collaborative partners from all backgrounds. NCPH actively supports diversity and inclusion amongst its membership and at its events and does not tolerate discrimination or harassment in any form.

Discrimination is the unjust or prejudicial treatment of others based on difference. Harassment includes but is not limited to:

- intimidation or unwanted attention based on gender, sexual identity, gender identity, gender experience, race, physical appearance, religion, or other group identity;
- threats or acts of violence;
- deliberate misgendering;
- unwelcome sexual attention, including unsolicited physical contact;
- abusive verbal comments in public and online spaces;
- sustained, non-constructive disruption of programming.

We seek constructive resolutions to disagreements, which can yield new ways of seeing and thinking. Anyone who violates the above may face sanctions.

All attendees of the NCPH annual meeting were required to acknowledge this policy and to agree to abide by it at the time of registration.

Attendees are encouraged to immediately report instances of harassment during the annual meeting. To make a report, please contact the NCPH Executive Director and Board Officers (Kristine Navarro-McElhane, Denise Meringolo, Gregory Smoak, Sharon Leon and Ed Roach) at codeofconduct@ncph.org. However, if you or others are in imminent danger, please first phone emergency services at 911.

Early registration ends March 1, 2023. Regular registration begins March 2 and ends March 29, 2023. No pre-conference registrations will be accepted after March 29, 2023. After that date, it will be necessary to register onsite at the conference at a higher rate to cover the increased work associated with processing onsite registrations, and the availability of tickets for meals, special events, workshops, etc. cannot be guaranteed.

The registration area for the conference will be in the Terrace Foyer on the Ballroom Level of the Hyatt Regency Atlanta.

Refund requests Refund requests must be submitted in writing and sent via email to ncph@iupui.edu no later than March 29, 2023, with an exception for positive COVID-19 tests preventing the attendee from traveling to Atlanta.

- 100% refund of registration fee (minus a 20% administration fee) will be issued if cancellation request is received by March 1, 2023.
- 50% refund of registration fee will be issued if cancellation request is received between March 1 and March 29, 2023.
- No refunds will be issued for requests received after March 29, 2023, except in case of a positive COVID-19 test from the attendee or someone the attendee lives with or provides primary care for.

Cancellations: Tours or other events may be canceled, and refunds issued, if an insufficient number of registrations are received.

Special Needs or Assistance: Pursuant to the Americans with Disabilities Act and our Event Accessibility Plan located at <http://bit.ly/NCPHAccessibility>, please contact the NCPH Executive Office at ncph@iupui.edu or (317) 274-2716 by March 1, 2023 should you have accessibility needs or require assistance.

COVID-19 PROTOCOLS

NCPH is monitoring COVID-19 in the Atlanta area and is following guidance from state and local health departments and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) regarding large gatherings. This includes following CDC recommendations on preventing the spread of COVID-19.

We are taking these measures to assure the 2023 conference is as safe as possible for attendees and for the local community:

- We request that attendees be fully vaccinated for COVID-19 OR provide a recent (within 48 hours) negative test result at the registration desk when you check in. We recognize that there is no standard definition of “fully vaccinated,” but we recommend the full dosage of the vaccine plus at least one booster.
- All attendees are required to wear a face mask at all indoor conference events. This includes while on buses to and from evening events and tours and during the evening events and indoor tours, unless actively eating or drinking. The CDC recommends N-95 masks for the most protection. We will provide masks onsite in case you forget to bring them.
- All NCPH staff and conference volunteers participating in the conference must likewise be fully vaccinated and masked.
- If a registrant must cancel due to COVID-related illness, NCPH will issue a full refund for their registration fees. If you are sick or feeling you are getting sick, we insist that you stay home.
- We'll be working closely with the Hyatt to ensure the presence of hand sanitizer and the cleanliness of facilities. We'll also be setting rooms at reduced capacity to ensure personal distance in sessions.

NCPH will revise these protocols as needed based upon local conditions and the guidance of the local health department and/or CDC.

NCPH EVENTS ACCESSIBILITY POLICY AND GUIDELINES

The National Council on Public History is committed to fostering an annual meeting environment that is inclusive and accessible to all our attendees. To that end, our annual meeting will meet and wherever possible exceed the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act (1990). NCPH will provide attendees with accessibility information that may impact their ability to fully participate in the meeting and will work directly with conference registrants to meet accessibility needs to the maximum extent we are financially and logistically able.

In August 2019 the Board of Directors approved a new conference accessibility plan to lay out our policies and procedures related to conference accessibility. You can read the full document, NCPH Guidelines for Building an Accessible Annual Meeting, at <https://ncph.org/about/governance-committees/ncph-accessibility-guidelines/>.

WHY IS NCPH ASKING FOR MY PRONOUNS?

When you registered for the conference, you may have noticed a question about pronouns. NCPH gives attendees the option to let us know what pronouns you use. You're under no obligation to give us this information; if you do, you'll find a sticker in your badge onsite with the correct pronouns. We hope you'll wear the sticker, and look for stickers on other attendees and presenters too, as part of NCPH's ongoing effort to make our conference as inclusive and welcoming as possible.

Lose your sticker, or didn't give your pronouns when you registered? No problem! Pronoun stickers are available at the NCPH registration desk in the Terrace Foyer (Ballroom Level) of the Hyatt Regency!

RECORDING POLICIES

The presentations and commentaries presented during the meeting are solely for those in attendance and should not be taped or recorded or otherwise reproduced without the consent of the presenters and the National Council on Public History. Recording, copying, or reproducing a presentation without the consent of the author is a violation of common law copyright. NCPH reserves the right to use images and recordings of the conference and those in attendance for educational and promotional purposes.

CONFERENCE CONNECTIONS – FIND A MEETING MENTOR

If you are attending an NCPH annual meeting for the first time, welcome! We're excited that you will be joining us, but we understand that conferences can be intimidating. Every conference is unique, and our Conference Connections program might help you find your feet or build your schedule.

Are you feeling overwhelmed figuring out the difference between sessions, working groups, and workshops? Wondering whether or not you should order business cards? Looking for advice on presenting your first poster? Don't worry, we can help! If you are a first-time attendee or new to NCPH you can sign up to be paired with a seasoned conference professional who can give you the inside scoop on making the most out of the annual meeting. As you prepare for the conference, contact your mentor with any questions you may have, then attend the meet-up Wednesday evening (April 12) and break in the exhibit hall on Friday afternoon (April 14) to check in.

HOTEL INFORMATION

THE HYATT REGENCY ATLANTA

265 Peachtree Street NE, Atlanta, GA 30303
Phone: 1-404-577-1234
hyattregencyatlanta.com

The Hyatt Regency in downtown Atlanta, Georgia, is the main location for conference sessions and events. Conference events will be held at the Hyatt unless otherwise noted in the description.

Please note the maps of the Hyatt Regency, located on page 61 of this Program. Most of NCPH's conference activities are located on the Ballroom Level, Exhibit Level, and Atlanta Conference Level, which are all accessible from the bay of elevators in the Main Atrium (you'll be going down).

The National Council on Public History has secured a block of rooms at the hotel at a rate of $201/night; reservations must be made by March 22, 2023. Please note that the block is likely to fill before this date. Please use the Hyatt Regency's online portal to reserve your room. The link can be found at <https://ncph.org/conference/2023-annual-meeting/hotel-and-travel/>.

NURSING CARER'S ROOM

NCPH has secured a guest room at the Hyatt to be used by nursing carers who need privacy to pump or feed. Please visit the NCPH registration desk in the Terrace Foyer to check out the room key. A mini-fridge will be in the room for storage, but please remember to clear it before the end of the day.

QUIET ROOM

If you need to step away from the hustle and bustle of the conference, we have a quiet room set up in Auburn on the Atlanta Conference Level of the Hyatt. Come here to send a quick email, close your eyes for a few, or prep for your session—but no talking or music allowed!

GENDER-NEUTRAL RESTROOMS

The men's restroom on the Ballroom Level of our space at the Hyatt has been turned into a gender neutral bathroom. This bathroom has been marked on the map on page 62, and there will be prominent signage on-site to help you locate it. Anyone is welcome to use this bathroom!

GETTING TO (AND AROUND) ATLANTA

All roads lead to Atlanta. Photo courtesy of the Atlanta Convention and Visitors Bureau.

GETTING TO ATLANTA

Air

Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport is the world's busiest airport by passenger count, with over 107 million people passing through each year. Named after the two Atlanta mayors who were most instrumental in Atlanta's growth as an air transportation hub, ATL offers more than 150 domestic and 70 international non-stop flights. For more information, including terminal maps and airport amenities, visit www.atl.com.

Interstate

All roads lead to Atlanta! Well, at least three major interstates do. Interstate 20 runs east-west, and Interstates 75 and 85 run north-south. I-75 and I-85 combine for a distance of 7.5 miles to form Atlanta's Downtown Connector. To reach the Hyatt Regency: Traveling northbound along the downtown connector, take exit 248C, turn left onto Andrew Young International Blvd. Proceed 0.5 miles and turn right onto Peachtree Street. The Hyatt Regency is 1.5 blocks north on your right at 265 Peachtree Street NE.

Rail

Amtrak has service to Atlanta on the Crescent Route, which runs a route from New York City to New Orleans. The Amtrak Peachtree Station is located at 1688 Peachtree St. NW.

Bus

Greyhound and Megabus both have service to downtown Atlanta. The Greyhound station is located at 232 Forsyth St. SW and the Megabus drops at MARTA's Civic Center Station, 435 W Peachtree St. NW. A taxi, Lyft, or Uber can transport you to the conference hotel.

GETTING TO THE HYATT REGENCY FROM HARTSFIELD-JACKSON AIRPORT

By MARTA Rail

The easiest and cheapest way to get to the Hyatt Regency from Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport is via MARTA rail service. Follow signs to Baggage Claim and enter the rail station from the North or South terminal. Once inside the station you may purchase or reload a Breeze Card or get a Breeze paper ticket from an automated ticket machine.

All departing trains travel northbound. The nearest stop to the Hyatt Regency is Peachtree Center Station. After exiting the train at Peachtree Center, follow signs to the John Portman exit, then follow signs to Peachtree Street East. At street level, turn right and walk about a block to the hotel. One-way fare from the airport to downtown Atlanta is $2.50. For more information on MARTA fares and multi-day passes, visit www.martaguide.com.

By Car

Driving time from the airport to the Hyatt Regency varies by time of day and traffic levels, but generally takes 18 - 30 minutes. Take Interstate 75/85 North to Exit 248C. Turn left onto Andrew Young International Boulevard. Proceed 0.5 miles and turn right onto Peachtree Street. The Hyatt Regency is 1.5 blocks north on your right at 265 Peachtree Street NE.

By Shuttle

A one-way fare on a shared-ride shuttle to the Hyatt Regency is $16.50. Visit <https://www.atl.com/ground-transportation/> for more information.

By Lyft/Uber/Taxi

Estimated taxi fare from the airport to the Hyatt Regency is $35.00. Lyft/Uber fares range from $17.00 - $22.00.

GETTING AROUND ATLANTA

MARTA Rail

The MARTA rail service features north, south, north-east, and east-west lines to get around the downtown area. You may purchase ($2.00) or reload a Breeze Card or get a Breeze paper ticket from an automated ticket machine inside the station. The regular MARTA fare is $2.50 for a one-way trip; day passes are available. The nearest rail stop to the Hyatt Regency is Peachtree Center station. For more information visit www.martaguide.com.

MARTA Streetcar

The Atlanta Streetcar (operated by MARTA) moves counterclockwise along a downtown loop covering 12 stops stretching from Centennial Olympic Park to the Martin Luther King, Jr. National Historical Park. A one-trip fare on the Atlanta Streetcar is $1.00, or you can purchase a day pass for $3.00. The nearest streetcar stops to the Hyatt are Carnegie at Spring and Peachtree Center. For more information visit www.itsmarta.com/streetcar.aspx.

MARTA Buses

You can use a MARTA Breeze Card or pay cash ($2.50) to ride the bus. If you pay with cash, you won't get a free transfer to the train. Purchase Breeze Cards and fare at any MARTA station or online at www.breezecard.com. Bus 40 stops outside the Hyatt Regency on Peachtree Street and moves south to West End from that point. For more information visit www.itsmarta.com/bus-schedules.aspx.

Lyft/Uber/Taxi

Taxis are available at the motor lobby exit of the Hyatt Regency. Lyft and Uber are generally less expensive than taxis. To save money, consider using these ride share services with other attendees who are heading to the same neighborhood as you, or booking larger vehicles for group meal events like Out to Lunch and Dine ArounDs.

Bikers along the Atlanta Beltline. Image courtesy of the Atlanta Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Rental Bike/Scooter

Electric bike and scooter rentals are available around Atlanta through several vendors. There is a local curfew on use of these vehicles from 9:00 pm - 4:00 am. Vendors include Bird (available via the Bird app); Lime (via the Lime app); and Spin (via the Spin app). The Relay bike share is a non-motorized bike option available via the HOPR app.

ACCESSIBLE TRANSPORTATION

Checker Cab (<http://www.atlantacheckercab.com/>) offers transportation by accessible vans with side-entry or rear wheelchair ramps, and at the same meter rate as normal taxis. Call 24-48 hours in advance to reserve transport from the airport.

All MARTA trains, stations, and fixed-route buses are fully accessible. MARTA Mobility provides complimentary transit services for persons who cannot ride or disembark from other MARTA transit services. Riders should purchase a Breeze card to use MARTA Mobility services. See the MARTA Mobility guide at <https://www.itsmarta.com/marta-mobility-guide.aspx>.

WEATHER

April in Atlanta brings a mild spring climate and beautiful flowering trees. Average temperatures during our conference week range from a high of 71F to a low of 52F. April can bring rain (average 10 days/4.5 inches), but it also brings blossoming cherry trees, dogwood, eastern redbud, deciduous magnolia, crabapple, and azaleas.

FROM THE 2023 LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE

NCPH 2023 will take place at the Hyatt Regency Atlanta on Peachtree Street. The path that would become Peachtree, Atlanta's central spine, was important for Cherokees and members of the Muscogee (Creek) confederacy, connecting Fort Daniel in Gwinnett County to the Creek settlement of Standing Peach Tree on the Chattahoochee River. Standing Peach Tree village served as a boundary between Creeks and Cherokees until 1825, when white settlers arrived in the area and forced the Muscogee Creeks to cede most of their land in Georgia.

Peachtree's footprint grew into a bustling railroad hub before the Civil War. The ancient trails along the ridgelines were ideal for railroad construction; the city's first name in 1837 was Terminus, as the end of the line for the Western and Atlantic Railroad. In 1845 the town became Atlanta, so named, the story goes, as a feminized version of 'Atlantic.'

Atlanta, Ga. Federal soldiers by gun in captured fort, 1864. Library of Congress, Prints & Photographs Division, Civil War Photographs, LC-DIG-cwpb-03401.

By 1864, with a population of nearly 10,000, Atlanta lay at the junction of four railroads and was a center of Confederate supply lines. General Sherman's army arrived in July and gained control of the city by September. Before leaving Atlanta on his March to the Sea, Sherman's engineers destroyed forty percent of the city. Out of the city's destruction came one of its founding myths: Atlanta would be a phoenix, rising from the ashes. Atlanta's railroads were operational a year later.

As in other parts of the South, Reconstruction in Atlanta was a liberatory moment with new constitutional freedoms, yet deeply undercut by racist backlash. Following Reconstruction, Atlanta became the self-styled capital of the "New South." The commitment to a pro-business order showed in the city's hosting of fairs and expositions meant to attract national and international investors and culminating with the Cotton States and International Exposition in 1895, where Booker T. Washington gave his "Atlanta Compromise" speech.

Cotton States and International Exposition, Piedmont Park, Atlanta, Georgia, 1895. Library of Congress, Prints & Photographs Division, LC-DIG-ds-12572.

By the end of the 19th century, Atlanta's population had more than quadrupled, becoming Georgia's largest city. But it was two separate cities, one white and one black. African Americans made up 46 percent of Atlanta's population by 1900 but, due to the rise of Jim Crow laws, black and white residents occupied strictly segregated public spaces. Faced with restrictive segregation laws and redlining, African Americans established a vibrant business and entertainment district along Auburn Avenue, east of downtown. In time that district became known as Sweet Auburn, home to the Atlanta Life Insurance Company, owned by formerly enslaved man turned entrepreneur and millionaire Alonzo Herndon, and to the nation's first African American daily newspaper, the Atlanta Daily World.

The city's ambitious, entrepreneurial attitude, the "Atlanta Spirit," has long shaped the city's historical identity. But in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, the Atlanta Spirit often masked labor unrest and racial and ethnic tensions. The 1906 Atlanta Race Riot left dozens of African Americans dead and hardened a white campaign to stamp out black suffrage. The 1915 lynching of Jewish business manager Leo Frank led, in part, to the revival of the Ku Klux Klan atop Stone Mountain on Thanksgiving Day of that year. Atlanta's image of itself obscured the entrenched racial caste system of the modern South.

By the 1950s, however, the vigor of its African American community provided the foundation for Atlanta to become the cradle of the modern Civil Rights Movement. The infrastructure created by "Sweet Auburn" Avenue combined with the city's historically Black colleges and universities like Spelman, Morehouse, and Clark Atlanta, allowed a variety of organizations and leaders to mobilize the local Black community in challenges to the racial status quo through voter registration drives, legal action, and civil disobedience. The Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) formed in Atlanta in 1957 to coordinate protest activities across the South. Led by Martin Luther King, Jr., the SCLC's work was instrumental in the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965. A legacy of the Civil Rights Movement was the rise to power of African American politicians, resulting in the election in 1973 of Maynard Jackson, the first African American mayor of a major Southern city.

The city's growth in the 1960s and 1970s was defined by urban renewal campaigns, a construction boom, the introduction of professional sports, and the development of Atlanta's mass transit system, MARTA. Yet three interstates divided downtown and plowed through historically African American neighborhoods, displacing Black residents, while many white residents fled the city to escape integration. Atlanta architect and developer John Portman transformed the downtown Atlanta skyline and contributed to the revitalization of the inner city. Portman's Hyatt Regency Atlanta, opened in May 1967, was hailed by architectural critics and the first-of-its-kind open-atrium design influenced hotel architecture worldwide. Portman's buildings, which include the Westin Peachtree Plaza—the world's tallest hotel when it opened in 1976—now dominate the downtown business district.

The 1996 Summer Olympic Games proved to be an economic catalyst for the city, drawing international investment and bringing attention to Atlanta's cultural offerings. Between 2010-2018, the Metro Atlanta region had the fourth fastest growing population in the US, now 5.9 million. Along with growth comes a rapidly changing demographic. A steady flow of immigrants and refugees in recent decades has turned Atlanta into a truly global city. Nearly fifteen percent of Metro Atlanta's population is foreign-born. This growth reflects a trend throughout the South and has often brought friction over work and public spaces.

Today Atlanta is a decentralized suburban city, defined by multiple hubs, linked by a network of freeways and interstates (and increasingly snarled traffic). Yet the name "Peachtree" can be found on roads and businesses in every suburban county, connecting our sprawling metropolis to its roots. Atlanta has stories to tell, more than what can be found in summary, and we're excited to showcase the city's history as we gather in person for the first time since 2019!

DINING AND DRINKS

Atlanta is a foodie's paradise, with no shortage of James Beard Award-winning chefs and every cuisine imaginable. From high-end restaurants to street fare, Atlanta has it all. Here is a sampling of Atlanta's culinary offerings. For those attendees not comfortable with indoor dining, we've marked restaurants that offer outdoor dining. Food delivery to the Hyatt Regency is available from hundreds of local restaurants through DoorDash, Uber Eats, Postmates, and Grubhub.

EXHIBITS

We invite you to visit the organizations exhibiting in the Grand Hall West on the Ballroom Level of the Hyatt Regency Atlanta!

Be sure to visit our Commons gathering area in the exhibit hall to relax and connect with colleagues and friends. Several pop-up exhibits and activities will be appearing in the exhibit hall, so consult your Errata sheet to see the day's events! Pop-ups are additional opportunities for you to experience more conference content in an informal and participatory way. The exhibit hall will also play host to Thursday afternoon's poster session and reception, so make sure to stop by, grab a snack, and check out some exemplary work. If you need to decompress, grab a seat at one of our crafting tables and make something to remember your conference experience.

First Time Attendee and Conference Connections Meet-Up

Wednesday, April 12, 5:30 pm – 6:00 pm

(Regency V, Ballroom Level)

Ticket: Included with Opening Reception ticket ($10)

Join NCPH leaders, committee members, and established NCPH conference-goers for informal conversation and to learn how to make the most of your conference experience, before joining other attendees for the Opening Reception. If you're part of our Conference Connections mentoring program, we suggest using this time to meet up with your mentor or mentee.

Opening Reception

Wednesday, April 12, 6:00 pm – 7:30 pm

(Regency V, Ballroom Level)

Ticket: $10

NCPH President Kristine Navarro-McElhane, 2023 Program Committee Co-chairs Marla Miller, Tara White, and Lacey Wilson, and Local Arrangements co-chairs Jennifer Dickey and Amy Wilson welcome you to NCPH's Annual Meeting—our first in-person conference since spring of 2019—to gather with collegiality, joy, and determination. Park your suitcase and enjoy hors d'oeuvres and conversation with colleagues and friends. We can't wait to be with you all together once more. Sponsored by the William G. Pomeroy Foundation.

Opening Plenary | Considering the Revolution: The Rhetoric of Freedom

Wednesday, April 12, 8:00 pm – 9:30 pm

(Regency VI, Ballroom Level)

Ticket: FREE

Join us for the third in a series of five roundtables designed to explore and interrogate the American Revolution ahead of the 250th anniversary. Designed as a three-part suite of programming, a virtual roundtable grounding us in the history and scholarship of slavery, freedom, and the Revolution was held in March 2023 (view the recording at <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=70tb2jbGbZE>) ahead of the annual meeting. Second, this in-person opening plenary will allow conference attendees to dig deeper into the theme “The Rhetoric of Freedom” with our facilitator and scholars in a more conversational style. We'll follow up with a concurrent session on Thursday of the conference that is designed to provide support for interpreters and strategies as they engage our publics in these essential conversations. Co-sponsored by the National Park Service and the University of Massachusetts Amherst.

Facilitator: Sylvea Hollis, Montgomery College

Participants: Yveline Alexis, Oberlin College
Ista Clarke, Charleston County Parks Department
Maya Davis, Riversdale House Museum
Marcus Nevius, University of Missouri

Dr. Sylvea Hollis is an Assistant Professor of African and African American History at Montgomery College. She earned a PhD in US History from the University of Iowa. Before coming to Montgomery College, Dr. Hollis was a National Park Service-Mellon Postdoctoral Fellow and taught courses in gender and sexuality in the American Studies Department at The George Washington University. She earned a MA in History Museum Studies from the Cooperstown Graduate Program (SUNY-Oneonta) and has a BS in History from the University of Montevallo, a small public liberal arts institution in Alabama. Her most current work is a research project on the “Birmingham Years” of the African American sculptor, John W. Rhoden, for a forthcoming exhibition catalog with the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. Hollis also runs a blog (<http://www.sylveahollis.com>) that explores the intersections between African American history, archives, public humanities, and teaching.

Dr. Yveline Alexis earned her degrees at Cornell and the University of Massachusetts Amherst. Her interdisciplinary degrees in history, Africana studies and Latin, LatinX, and Caribbean studies allows for cross-fertilization between her research, teaching, and service styles. After a postdoctoral fellowship at the Critical Caribbean Studies and Africana Studies Department at Rutgers University, she began her tenure-track post in Ohio. Currently, she is an assistant professor at Oberlin College who teaches courses, mentors students, and serves the campus and disciplines about the African Diaspora and broader Caribbean.

Ista Clarke is the Cultural History Interpretive Specialist for the Charleston County Parks Department and the former Operations Manager at the Old Slave Mart Museum in Charleston, South Carolina, located in the remains of the last standing slave auction hall in the state. Clarke was responsible for training interpreters, emphasizing empathy and developing strategies for dealing with racially biased and inappropriate visitor commentary. Previously, Clarke worked as a docent at the Old Exchange and Provost Dungeon in Charleston.

Maya Davis is the director of the Riversdale House Museum in Prince George's County, Maryland. She currently serves as a Commissioner on the Maryland Lynching Truth and Reconciliation Commission and the Maryland Commission on African American History and Culture. Born and raised in Washington, Maya is a graduate of Howard and George Washington Universities where she obtained degrees in History and Museum Studies.

Dr. Marcus Nevius holds a joint appointment in the Africana Studies and History programs at the University of Rhode Island until the end of this year, at which point he'll be joining the history department at the University of Missouri. Originally from New Brunswick, New Jersey, he holds a BA and MA in history from North Carolina Central University, and a PhD in history from The Ohio State University. His research and teaching interests include the histories of African Americans, slave resistance, slavery-based economies, and abolition during the Age of Revolutions (1775-1848).

New Member Breakfast

Thursday, April 13, 7:30 am – 8:30 am

(Chicago ABCD, Exhibit level)

Ticket: $15

New NCPH members are welcome to join members of the NCPH board, staff, and Membership Committee for a continental breakfast and mingling on the first morning of the conference. Get to know the leadership of the organization and fortify yourself for a day of sessions, fellowship, and fun.

Out to Lunch

Thursday, April 13, 12:00 pm – 1:15 pm

(Meeting locations arranged on a per-group basis)

Ticket: FREE, but sign up either in advance or onsite. Cost of lunch is the responsibility of the attendee.

SPECIAL EVENTS

Looking for lunch plans? Out to Lunch is an event designed to help public history professionals meet colleagues in an informal setting. Prior to the event, attendees will be placed in groups of four or five, which will then meet for lunch at a restaurant of their choosing. It's a great opportunity to mingle, connect, and experience some local flavor. If you're not sure where to eat, check out NCPH's restaurant guide in the Program. If you're a grad student, see our special student version of this event on Friday, April 14. For more information, visit ncph.org/conference/2023-annual-meeting.

Poster Session and Reception

Thursday, April 13, 1:00 pm – 3:00 pm

(Grand Hall West, Exhibit Level)

Ticket: FREE, no advance registration is required

Posters will be on display and their creators will be on hand to discuss their projects, with light refreshments served. The poster session is a format for public history presentations about projects that use visual evidence. It offers an alternative for presenters eager to share their work through one-on-one discussion, can be especially useful for works-in-progress, and may be a particularly appropriate format for presentations where visual or material evidence represents a central component of the project. After the poster session, posters will remain up in the exhibit hall for the duration of the conference for those who may feel more comfortable perusing at your own pace. Co-sponsored by Duquesne University, Kristine Navarro-McElhane, and SolidLight Inc.

Future Visioning: A Collaborative Inquiry and Activation with The Inclusionum

Thursday, April 13, 2:00 pm – 5:00 pm

(Hanover ABCDEFG)

Ticket: FREE, but advance registration is required

Join The Inclusionum at NCPH 2023 for a participatory activation where we unpack where we are now after the last decade of seeking to understand the meaning of “inclusion” as a continually transforming word, concept, value, and set of practices. Today, the cultural and political landscape is ever-shifting. Memory, history, truth, and heritage are all contested. As public heritage practitioners, what are we saying needs “to be determined” at this moment?

Using a decade of learning from The Inclusionum's collaborative digital platform (<https://inclusionum.com/>), join us as we name, illuminate, determine, embody, and assess the moment. We will play with, apply, and engage the critical questions and paradigms offered in the new book Transforming Inclusion in Museums as modes of visioning the future together and making “good trouble.”

Facilitators: Porchia Moore, University of Florida
Rose Paquet, University of Washington
Aletheia Wittman, Museums and Cultural Heritage Consultant

Dr. Porchia Moore is Assistant Professor and Department Head of Museum Studies at the University of Florida. Formerly Consulting Curator and Inclusion Catalyst at the Columbia Museum of Art, Moore presents regularly at museum conferences such as AAM, MCN, Museums and the Web, AAAM, and others. Moore coined the phrase, “The Inclusive Museum Movement” and has served as one of the original architects of Museums and Race, advisor to Museums as Site for Social Action, and is the co-creator of The Visitors of Color project. Moore holds a doctorate in Library and Information Science and a graduate certificate in Museum Management from the University of South Carolina and the McKissick Museum. A critical race scholar examining the role and function of race in museums and cultural heritage institutions, Moore is an IMLS Laura Bush 21st Century Cultural Heritage Informatics Leadership Fellow.

Dr. Rose Paquet is a writer, artist, and facilitator. She works with people to use the power of the imagination to dream and enact future possibilities that center community care in its widest understanding—care for the body and soul, care for both human and non-human kin, care for the soil beneath our feet, the air we breathe, and the water we drink. Rose co-founded The Inclusionum in 2012 and currently acts as co-director.

Aletheia Wittman is a consultant, coach, and facilitator who partners with individuals and teams navigating inclusive transformation and the process of institutional genealogy within arts and cultural heritage institutions. She co-founded The Inclusionum in 2012. With fellow Inclusionum co-directors, Dr. Porchia Moore and Dr. Rose Paquet, she co-authored the book Transforming Inclusion in Museums: The Power of Collaborative Inquiry, published by Rowman & Littlefield / AAM Press in 2022. Wittman previously worked at the Burke Museum of Natural History and Culture in Seattle, WA from 2017-2020 and from 2012-2016 managed exhibits, youth, and family programming for the Seattle Architecture Foundation (SAF). Aletheia holds an MA in Museology from the University of Washington where she researched emerging curatorial practice in art museums and how those practices engage with social justice issues.

The Consultants' Speakeasy

Thursday, April 13, 5:00 pm – 7:00 pm

(Grand Hall West Foyer)

Ticket: FREE, but advance registration is required

Do you work as a consulting historian, or are you interested in becoming a consultant and looking to learn more about consulting and contract work? Grab a drink with the NCPH Consultants Committee and join new and experienced consultants in the Speakeasy (formerly known as the Consultants' Reception) for an informal reception that will include hors d'oeuvres, a cash bar, and lively conversation. Organized by the Consultants Committee. Sponsored by Historical Research Associates, Inc. Co-sponsored by Kathleen Conti, Firefly Preservation (Cheri Szcodronski), and Bill Willingham.

Dine Arounds

Thursday, April 13, 6:00 pm

(Meet at registration)

Ticket: FREE, but sign up onsite. Cost of dinner is the responsibility of the attendee.

Dine Arounds are an informal opportunity to talk about important issues, make new contacts, and get a taste of the Atlanta food scene.

SPECIAL EVENTS

In advance of the annual meeting, individuals who volunteer to be facilitators suggest topics for discussion, find suitable restaurants, and make reservations for their group. To participate, find the sign-up sheet in the conference registration area in advance of the 6:00 pm start-time, and come prepared to talk. Your facilitator will lead the group to the restaurant and start the evening's conversation.

Dine Arounds this year include:

- HBCU Musical Pop Culture as a Lens to Africana Public History, led by Uzoma Miller, Ohio University
- Finding Your Niche in Public History, led by Nedra Deadwyler, Save Your Space and Civil Bikes
- History in the Federal Government, led by Melissa Queen, United States Postal Investigative Service

An Evening at the Atlanta History Center

Thursday, April 13, 7:30 pm - 10:30 pm
(Atlanta History Center, 130 West Paces Ferry Rd. NW)
$71 general admission | $51 students

Join us for an evening of celebration at the Atlanta History Center as we mark our first in-person conference since 2019 and, belatedly, the forty-year anniversary of the founding of NCPH. Enjoy abundant appetizers, hors d'oeuvres, and desserts with your NCPH family, with free rein to explore exhibits in the Atlanta History Center's main building, including its new interpretation and restoration of the Battle of Atlanta cyclorama. We can't wait to gather with you all once more.

Food will be provided with the cost of your ticket, and cash bars will be available. Buses will begin to board outside the Hyatt Regency at 7:00 pm, and will leave for the Atlanta History Center as they fill. Buses will bring attendees back to the hotel between 9:45 pm and 10:30 pm. We thank the Atlanta History Center for their in-kind sponsorship of space and staff time for this event, and the Middle Tennessee State University Center for Historic Preservation for contributing to the cost of bus transportation.

Public History Educators' Forum

Friday, April 14, 8:00 am – 10:00 am
(Baker, Atlanta Conference Level)
Ticket: $31

This annual event is an opportunity for faculty to share ideas about running graduate and undergraduate public history programs and to talk about university, departmental, and a wide variety of other issues. The discussion is always lively. Organized by the Curriculum and Training Committee and sponsored by Georgia State University, Kennesaw State University, and the University of West Georgia.

Speed Networking

Friday, April 14, 10:00 am – 12:00 pm
(Regency VI-VII, Ballroom Level)
Ticket: FREE, but advance registration is required

NCPH's professional twist on "speed dating" creates stress-free networking opportunities at the annual meeting. This is one of the conference's most popular events! Graduate students, recent graduates, and new professionals will have the opportunity to meet with five established public history practitioners over the course of five fifteen-minute rotations. Before the buzzer sounds, participants may discuss career options, professional development, and any other aspects of the field. Prepare some questions in advance, bring your business cards, and expect to talk and listen a lot! Advance registration is required; space is limited to 60. Organized by the Professional Development Committee and sponsored by the Voces Oral History Center, University of Texas at Austin.

Out to Lunch – Grad Student Edition

Friday, April 14, 12:00 pm – 1:15 pm
(Meeting locations arranged on a per-group basis)
Ticket: FREE, but sign up either in advance or onsite. Cost of lunch is the responsibility of the attendee.

Out to Lunch – Grad Student Edition is tailored specifically for grad students. It's a great opportunity to mingle, connect with other students, and experience some local flavor. Graduate students will be placed in groups of four or five from different programs, which will then meet for lunch at a restaurant of their choosing. For more information, visit neph.org/conference/2023-annual-meeting.

Public Plenary | After the Party It's the Waffle House: Interpreting and Preserving the Hip Hop South

Friday, April 14, 6:00 pm – 7:30 pm
(Big Bethel AME Church, 220 Auburn Ave. NE)
FREE and open to the public

This year's public plenary is a conversation between three influential and award-winning educators and activists whose work explores the meanings, interpretations, and spaces of the hip hop genre, which has shaped Atlanta indelibly since the Civil Rights Movement. Experts on the hip hop south Regina Bradley, author of Chronicling Stankonia, and Maurice Hobson, author of The Legend of the Black Mecca, are joined by architect and designer Michael Ford, founder of the Hip Hop Architecture Camp and recent architect of the Bronx Hip Hop Museum, to talk about the stamp hip hop leaves on cities like Atlanta, public interpretations of hip hop, and the role it can play in community-building and education. Sponsored by Georgia Humanities.

Participants: Regina Bradley, Kennesaw State University
Michael Ford, The Hip Hop Architecture Camp and BrandNu Design
Maurice Hobson, Georgia State University

Dr. Regina N. Bradley is an award-winning writer and researcher of the Black American South. She is an alumna Nasir Jones HipHop Fellow (Hutchins Center, Harvard University, Spring 2016), Associate Professor of English and African Diaspora Studies at Kennesaw State University, faculty editor for Southern Cultures journal, and co-host of the critically acclaimed southern hip hop podcast Bottom of the Map with music journalist Christina Lee. A prominent public voice and leading scholar on contemporary southern Black life and hip hop culture, Dr. Bradley's work has been featured on a range of media outlets including Netflix's hip hop docuseries Hip-Hop Evolution, Washington Post, NPR, and Atlanta Journal Constitution. Dr. Bradley is the author of the critically acclaimed book Chronicling Stankonia: The Rise of the Hip-Hop South, which explores how Atlanta hip hop duo OutKast and hip hop influences the culture of the Black American South in the long shadow of the Civil Rights Movement.

Michael Ford, known as the "Hip-Hop Architect," is an architect, designer, educator, and founder of The Hip Hop Architecture Camp, a summer intensive which uses hip hop to introduce underrepresented youth to architecture, urban planning, and the built environment. Born and raised in Detroit, Ford received his Masters of Architecture degree from the University of Detroit Mercy (UDM), where he completed his graduate thesis titled "Hip Hop Inspired Architecture and Design." He has worked as a designer at Hamilton Anderson Associates located in Detroit, Mich. and as an adjunct professor at his alma matter. In 2010 he founded the studio BrandNu Design, which designed the Bronx Hip Hop Museum, which opened in 2018. Ford's Hip Hop Architecture research has been published in a variety of places including FastCo Design, Blavity, The Fader, CityLab and Vibe Magazine.

SPECIAL EVENTS

Dr. Maurice Hobson is an Associate Professor of Africana Studies and Historian at Georgia State University and author of the award-winning book The Legend of the Black Mecca: Politics and Class in the Making of Modern Atlanta. He explores the Black New South, serving as a witness in court cases and as a voice of insight for public historical markers, monuments, and museum exhibitions. He was consulted for the Netflix documentary “The Art of Organized Noize,” which featured the Atlanta production team that changed the sound of hip-hop with their work with OutKast and Goodie Mob; chief historian for the documentary “Maynard,” which detailed the life and times of the honorable Maynard Holbrook Jackson Jr., Atlanta’s first black mayor; the consulting historian for the “ESPN 30 For 30: Vick,” a documentary detailing the controversial career of NFL quarterback Michael Vick; and consulting producer and historian for HBO Documentaries’ “Atlanta’s Missing and Murdered: The Lost Children,” which details the dark history of the Atlanta Child Murders.

Awards Breakfast and Keynote

Saturday, April 15, 8:00 am – 10:00 am

(Regency VI-VII, Ballroom Level)

Ticket: $33

This is the time to celebrate the best in public history! There will be ample time to chat during breakfast before awards are presented for some of the most innovative work and admirable accomplishments in the profession today. Then, join us for a keynote address from the Black Craftspeople Digital Archive’s co-directors, Tiffany Momon and Torren Gatson. The Awards Breakfast and Keynote is sponsored by the American West Center, University of Utah. The Awards Program is sponsored by the University of Massachusetts Boston.

The awards event and keynote address are open to all conference registrants, although this ticket is required for the breakfast meal. Attendees without tickets will be admitted after the meal has begun and will be welcome to sit in the special seating provided.

Keynote | In the Making: Turning an Idea into a Movement

Dr. Torren Gatson is an Assistant Professor in the History department at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. Hailing from Delaware, he obtained both his bachelor’s and master’s degrees from North Carolina Central University. He went on to receive his PhD from Middle Tennessee State University. Gatson is a trained public historian and scholar of Southern US history. His work emphasizes 19th and 20th century African American built environments, with a particular interest in African American material culture. Gatson works with communities to build lasting public products that reflect the dynamic and difficult aspects of African American history. He is co-director of the Black Craftspeople Digital Archive.

Dr. Tiffany Momon is a public historian and Assistant Professor of History at Sewanee: The University of the South. She earned her PhD in Public History from Middle Tennessee State University, working with the Center for Historic Preservation. As a professor in Sewanee’s history department, Momon teaches courses in public history and digital history. Additionally, her role at Sewanee brings the responsibilities of serving as assistant director of the Roberson Project on Slavery, Race, and Reconciliation, an initiative investigating the university’s historical entanglements with slavery and slavery’s legacies. Momon is the founder and co-director of the Black Craftspeople Digital Archive (blackcraftspeople.org), a Black digital humanities project that centers Black craftspeople, their lives, and their contributions to the making and building of America. Throughout her career, Momon has lectured on Black craftspeople at organizations such as the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, the Museum of Early Southern Decorative Arts, and Winterthur Museum and Gardens. Her most recent publications include “John “Quash” Williams, Charleston Builder,” featured in the Journal of Early Southern Decorative Arts, and National Register of Historic Places nominations for Talladega College and Stillman College, two historically Black colleges in Alabama.

2023 WORKING GROUPS

The working group format is designed to facilitate substantive, focused, and extended seminar-like conversations on a particular topic. Discussants were selected from an open call in October. Prior to the conference, each has reviewed and commented on each other’s case statements, in which each discussant has explored their personal and professional experiences with the topic to work toward solutions to shared problems. Working groups are open to other conference-goers (unless otherwise noted) who would like to sit in on the discussions, but we ask that they respect the facilitators’ need to potentially limit participation from the audience.

See working group descriptions with their facilitators and discussants on the full schedule beginning on page 32.

NCPH inspires public engagement with the past and serves the needs of practitioners in putting history to work in the world. We build community among historians, expand professional skills and tools, foster critical reflection on historical practice, and advocate for history and historians.

Members of NCPH have access to:

The Public Historian

- a print and online journal offering the latest original research, case studies, reviews, and coverage of the ever-expanding international field of public history

Professional Development

- continuing education in workshops, working groups, and critical reflection on practical and theoretical issues

News of the Field

- Public History News, email updates, and other NCPH reports will keep you current

Community

- connect to thousands of other public historians through our blog History@Work; listservs; and the NCPH groups on Facebook and LinkedIn

Discounts on the Annual Meeting

- Salt Lake City 2024, Montreal 2025

Leadership Opportunities

- help to shape the profession and field by serving on committees and task forces

Advocacy Efforts

- NCPH, with the National Coalition for History, speaks on behalf of the profession and in the public interest on historical issues.

Online Resources

- Statement on Ethics and Professional Conduct, Tenure & Promotion guidelines, Guide to Public History Programs, best practices, consultant directory, searchable jobs page, and discounted JPASS access to journals

TRANSFORMING INCLUSION IN MUSEUMS

The Power of Collaborative Inquiry

PORCHIA MOORE, ROSE PAQUET, AND ALETHEIA WITTMAN

“Much like public schools, public museums are often vexing institutions. But history shows that organizing and struggle works; museums can be moved toward openness and inclusion, as this indispensable and inspiring book details. Its authors declare, ‘We must act before the cycle of forgetting begins again’ and this book makes that invitation irresistible.”

— Therese Quinn, Professor and Director of Museum and Exhibition Studies, University of Illinois at Chicago

Museum workers and lovers can use this book as a tool for engaging with inclusion anew, and as a terrain for collaborative inquiry and world-building that can help us imagine and realize new potential for museums in the future.

T1. A Day of Learning and Service at Oakland Cemetery

Wednesday, April 12, 9:00 am – 4:00 pm

Ticket: $18

Guide: Richard Harker, Oakland Cemetery Foundation

Start your conference experience with a day outside at Oakland Cemetery, one of the oldest historical plots of land in Atlanta and its oldest public park. Participants will take MARTA to Oakland Cemetery, where we'll start with a tour of the cemetery, followed by lunch on your own at one of the nearby restaurants. After lunch, the session "Partnerships Benefiting Everyone" will highlight the ongoing partnership between the Historic Oakland Foundation and the Department of Museums, Archives, and Rare Books at Kennesaw State University (see session description below). We'll do a couple hours of service work at the cemetery, and then we'll get back to the hotel in time to clean up for the evening's opening reception.

Offsite Session: Partnerships Benefiting Everyone

This offsite session will highlight the ongoing partnership between Historic Oakland Foundation and the Department of Museums, Archives, and Rare Books (MARB) at Kennesaw State University. Through the work of cemetery staff, university staff and students, and community stakeholders, Historic Oakland Foundation and MARB seek to tell a more complete story of the cemetery through exhibit programming focused on African American burials and cemetery laborers including education panels, historic markers, and an audio tour. Held at Oakland Cemetery, this session will provide an on-the-ground experience for conference attendees seeking to explore the benefits of interpretive partnerships, tour the cemetery, and complete a service project.

Facilitator: Jennifer Dickey, Kennesaw State University

Participants: Marcy Breffle, Historic Oakland Foundation
James Mitchum, Kennesaw State University
James Newberry, Department of Museums, Archives and Rare Books at Kennesaw State University
Jessica VanLanduyt, Historic Oakland Foundation

T2. Cherokee Sites Bus Tour

Wednesday, April 12, 9:00 am – 4:00 pm

Ticket: $58

Guide: Andrew Denson, Western Carolina University

Explore public interpretation of the Cherokee past in two very different settings: New Echota State Historic Site and the Funk Heritage Center. New Echota was the capital of the Cherokee Nation during the years just prior to Removal. Established in 1825, the town reflected the creation of a Cherokee national government and served as an emblem of the Cherokee people's commitment to protecting tribal land and sovereignty. As the Cherokee capital, it became a center for the struggle over the Indian Removal Policy. Opened as a state historic site in the early 1960s, New Echota today features twelve original and reconstructed buildings. On our way back to Atlanta, we will stop at the Funk Heritage Center, a museum dedicated to southeastern indigenous histories and Georgia in the frontier era. Join us for a conversation about the challenges and rewards of interpreting the histories of the Native South. Lunch is included in the price of this tour.

T3. Downtown Atlanta at Sunrise Walking Tour

Thursday, April 13, 7:30 am – 9:00 am

Ticket: $20

Guide: Jennifer Dickey, Kennesaw State University

Start your conference out on the right foot! This tour is an early morning walk through downtown to introduce conference attendees to the history of downtown Atlanta. The walking tour will focus on important landmarks and architecture along this one-mile route down Atlanta's Peachtree Street from the Hyatt Regency to Five Points. This is a great way to get your bearings and orient yourself in the city.

T4. Fall in Love with Atlanta by Bike Tour

Thursday, April 13, 8:30 am – 12:00 pm

Ticket: $52

Get an introduction to Atlanta's history, art, and culture on this leisurely 8-mile bicycle tour. The route includes the MLK Historic District, Jackson Street Bridge, Old Fourth Ward Skate Park along the Atlanta Beltline, Inman Park, Krog Tunnel, Cabbagetown, and Oakland Cemetery, including sites from the city's Civil War and Civil Rights history. You'll discover Atlanta's vibrant street art scene and the "local" spots that make it a great place to live, work, and play. Bikes, helmets, bottled water, trail-mix snack, guides, and gratuity are included in your ticket fee. We'll meet at registration and go down to the bus together, which will take us to the tour start point on Auburn Avenue. Waivers will be signed upon arrival. All attendees should be comfortable riding a multi-gear bike with hand brakes.

T5. Public Health and Public History Bus Tour

Thursday, April 13, 1:00 pm – 4:00 pm

Ticket: $42

Guide: Staff at the David J. Sencer CDC Museum

Learn about developments in 20th and 21st century public health in a behind-the-scenes tour of the David J. Sencer CDC (Centers for Disease Control) Museum. By exploring the museum's exhibits and archives, tour attendees will get a glimpse into how public historians from different backgrounds work together to interpret CDC's history in a compelling way. Curators, archivists, and educators will guide groups of attendees between stations that showcase the museum's innovative exhibits, programs, oral history projects, and collections. Educators will discuss the challenges of creating the engaging programs that give a true CDC experience, such as CDC Museum Disease Detective Camp. Archivists will present a selection of artifacts gathered from the Global Polio Eradication Initiative History Project and the museum's permanent collection. Museum curators will discuss the development of the newest temporary exhibition, CDC at 75. Attendees must bring a government-issued ID. Non-US citizens must present a passport.

T6. Feeding Atlanta Walking Tour

Friday, April 14, 10:00 am – 1:00 pm

Ticket: $29

Guide: Dr. Angela Jill Cooley, professor and author of the book To Live and Dine in Dixie: The Evolution of Urban Food Culture in the Jim Crow South

Experience Atlanta by touring the sites of the historical eating places that nourished the city. Restaurants, cafes, and lunch counters fed urban appetites, offered entrepreneurial opportunities, and set the scene for civil rights contests. On this walking tour, we'll discuss the history of food service in the city; local laws that regulated public dining; and the proprietors, cooks, servers, and patrons who frequented these spaces as we view the historical sites of fine restaurants, segregated lunch counters, black cafes, and immigrant-owned businesses. We'll visit Auburn Avenue to learn about the thriving black business district and cafes that catered to the city's African American population; Decatur Street, which featured both immigrant- and black-owned quick-order eateries; the former Rich's department store where police arrested Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. for demanding service at the all-white Magnolia Room during the Atlanta Student Movement; and the sites of other eateries that have played a role in the city's rich multicultural history.

The first two hours of this tour will comprise the tour; the final hour will be a stop at the historic Sweet Auburn Market, where attendees can grab lunch. Lunch is not covered in the price of the tour.

T7. Martin Luther King, Jr. National Historical Park Walking Tour

Friday, April 14, 12:30 pm – 4:30 pm

Ticket: $15

Guide: Marty Smith, National Park Service

Visit the neighborhood where Martin Luther King, Jr. was born and raised, worshiped, and is buried. The tour includes visits to the exhibitions in the National Park Visitor Center, Historic Ebenezer Baptist Church, the Martin Luther King, Jr. birth home, and the King tomb. The tour will be led by Lead Ranger Marty Smith, who has worked for the National Park Service at the Martin Luther King, Jr. National Historical Park for over two decades. Participants will walk between the sites, all of which are located within the Martin Luther King, Jr. National Historic Park on Auburn Avenue. Visitors will travel to the Park by streetcar. Wear comfortable walking shoes and eat before the group meets; lunch is not provided.

T8. Women in Downtown Atlanta: Hearing Their Stories Walking Tour

Friday, April 14, 3:00 pm – 5:00 pm

Ticket: $10

Guide: Amy Durrell, History Afoot Atlanta

Interested in life in Atlanta for women? Join us for a walk through downtown, thinking about how women experienced the same city around the turn of the 20th century. Atlanta grew rapidly in the years after 1890, and life for women was changing as well. We will consider the ways women impacted their community and tell the stories of some dynamic women who changed the city. Hear the stories of Black women who were caring for their families and communities as the Civil War upset social norms. Learn about the kind of jobs white women found to help support their families or fulfill their ambitions. Who were the women writing in Atlanta, other than Margaret Mitchell? How did women play a role in politics before they could vote?

T9. Come One, Come All Walking Tour

Saturday, April 15, 10:00 am – 12:00 pm

Ticket: $10

Guide: Lisa Flaherty, History Afoot Atlanta

Americans have always been enamored with tomorrow. Its promise of progress and a better life has teased and enthralled us. Atlantans are no different. Parades have offered us a way to peek at the future. This tour will begin when public gatherings were being strictly controlled, and public spaces had to be re-imagined. We will then go back to the early 20th century and follow a portion of the route P.T. Barnum and his circus took. We will talk of Grover Cleveland and a time when mules ruled the streets. We will finish with a walk down Peachtree Street and a look at two of Atlanta's favorite parades: DragonCon and Pride.

T10. Black Mecca: The Cultural Politics of Atlanta's Hip Hop History Bus Tour

Saturday, April 15, 10:00 am – 1:00 pm

Ticket: $55

Guide: Maurice Hobson, Georgia State University

Join Dr. Maurice Hobson, author of the award-winning The Legend of the Black Mecca: Politics and Class in the Making of Modern Atlanta (2017) and one of Friday's plenary speakers, on a tour that explores the roots of Atlanta hip hop. Atlanta's hip hop scene, made famous by production team Organized Noise and artists OutKast and Goodie Mob, is rooted in the cultural politics of the city dating back to the rise of Mayor Maynard Jackson in the 1970s. Though touted for inspiring and funding a new era of Black Arts in the city, Jackson's regime exposed the class-based schisms of Atlanta's growing neoliberal and international commercial culture. Young Blacks expressed their frustration and anger with the disenfranchisement and criminalization of the poor and working-class through hip hop. On this tour we'll explore sites associated with this history and enrich participants' understanding of the music you love.

WORKSHOPS

NCPH workshops offer opportunities for intensive professional development. Space is limited, so please sign up early.

W1. Writing for the Public: Taking Out the Jargon

Wednesday, April 12, 8:00 am – 12:00 pm

(Hanover FG, Exhibit Level)

Ticket: $18

Facilitators: Richard Anderson, History@Work Editor; Rebekah Dobrasko, Texas Department of Transportation; Jessie Kratz, US National Archives; Christine L. Ridarsky, Rochester Public Library

As public historians, we are faced with turning academic or technical history documents into something appropriate for the public. While we may produce journal articles, National Register nominations, administrative histories, or oral histories as part of our work, we need a different type of writing for public consumption. Led by government historians and a History@Work editor with decades of experience in revising technical writing, this workshop will assist you in turning your work into blogs, K-12 curriculum, social media, and newspaper articles. Attendees will learn tips and tricks, review case studies, and gain valuable resources to captivate the public. This workshop is sponsored by the Committee for Government Historians.

W2. Preparing Historic House Museums and Historic Sites for America's 250th

Wednesday, April 12, 8:00 am – 5:00 pm

(Hanover B, Exhibit Level)

Ticket: $16 for morning session only | $33 for full day

Facilitators: Sara Evenson, University at Albany, SUNY; Mariaelena DiBenigno, William and Mary's Highland; Anne Lindsay, California State University, Sacramento; Laura Macaluso, Independent Scholar and York County History Center; Hilary Miller, Adams National Historical Park, National Park Service; Amy Speckart, Rare Book School at the University of Virginia

Are you ready for America's 250th? Open to public historians of any period, we will use a new toolkit to assist participants in shaping their approach to 2026. Participants can select just the morning session (ideal if you're just getting started with your 250th planning) or the full day experience (if your plans are a little more developed). In the morning session the workshop will cover engagement with the themes of America's 250th, building inclusive and dynamic narratives of the revolution(s), and creation of relevant and meaningful experiences for audiences. In the afternoon session participants should bring materials from their sites to workshop programming, collaboration, and funding opportunities.

W3. Digital Public History Lab

Wednesday, April 12, 12:30 pm – 5:00 pm

(Hanover CDE, Exhibit Level)

Ticket: $25

Facilitators: Julie Davis, 106 Group; Megan Smeznik, Kent State University

The popular Digital Public History Lab (formerly THATCamp NCPH) is back and better than ever. This workshop provides opportunities for collaborative learning and professional networking around digital resources, skills, and strategies for public historians and professionals working in adjacent fields (e.g. librarianship). You'll also have time for informal conversation and connections. The Digital Public History Lab is an inclusive, participatory experience.

All levels of tech-savviness (or lack thereof) are welcome. Organized by the NCPH Professional Development Committee. Sponsored by the Digital History Program at Clemson University.

Breakout Sessions

Scrollytelling as a Method for Digital Scholarship

Jubilee Marshall, New York University

For public historians, especially those whose work does not utilize data-driven visualization or complex computation, it may be challenging to conceive of digital projects that move beyond the communication of analog research into generative digital scholarship. This presentation will explore "scrollytelling" as a method through which public historians can blend traditional research and analysis with purposeful design to do so.

Scrollytelling integrates dynamic and engaging visuals with the continuous flow of the webpage, and thus offers a particularly effective digital experience for readers. Using scrollytelling strategically alongside qualitative analysis, public historians can create, revitalize, and expand on historical scholarship, using digital design as an intellectual method. This session will explore tools that can be helpful in designing a successful scrollytelling experience and include examples and case studies to illustrate the potential of this genre.

Demographic Data, Mapping, and Contested Monuments

Jason Boan and Shima Hosseininasab, North Carolina State University

Monuments and Spatial Patterns is an online, interactive digital public history project which combines the Southern Poverty Law Center's data on the location of confederate symbols with demographic data to search for hidden context and patterns. To demonstrate the correlation between demographic data and the location of confederate monuments, a few examples of monument removals will be highlighted throughout the session. The resulting Story Map provides analysis and lets users engage with and manipulate the data layers themselves, allowing individuals to find relevance and personal connections to our collective history. The Monuments and Spatial Patterns session will address the project goals, technical processes, and the role of Digital Public Historians in public discourse regarding contested monuments.

3D Technologies for Preservation and Storytelling

Megan S. Reed and Benjamin Baaske, National Center for Preservation Technology and Training

The Documentation Team from the National Center for Preservation Technology and Training (NCPTT) will bring laser scanners and 360 photogrammetry devices to demonstrate the range of 3D technology currently available at the Center in documenting cultural heritage sites and encourage brainstorming ideas on how best to apply these technologies in public storytelling and historic preservation practices. Participants will have the chance to test these technologies, see examples of previous work and ask how they can be incorporated into their projects and/or institutions.

WORKSHOPS

Shooting and Editing Smartphone Videos

Richard Anderson, Moravian University

This session will introduce participants to the basic skills required to create smartphone videos for museums, historic sites, humanities organizations, or public history courses. Designed for people with no experience and low comfort levels with technology, the session will aim to prepare participants to plan, shoot, and edit very simple videos, while also providing them with handouts and recommended resources for building on these rudimentary skills through more advanced learning. You will not leave the workshop as an advanced videographer; however, Richard will show you some of what is possible with smartphone video and leave you with enough information to know which skills you might like to develop further. Depending on the interests of participants, the session may focus more attention on applying these skills to public history pedagogy or in the programming, outreach, or promotional initiatives of a public history organization.

The session will combine mini-tutorials with brief, low-stakes, hands-on activities. The segment on planning will provide an overview of best practices for conceiving and planning short videos on a low budget (or no budget). The facilitator will also survey a few inexpensive pieces of production equipment, such as microphones, tripods, and camera rigs. The segment on shooting video will cover how to use smartphone apps like BeastCam and ProTake, as well as the native iOS and Android camera apps. Finally, the editing segment will introduce participants to the iMovie and Adobe Premiere Pro editing programs.

W4. Myths and Methodologies: Consulting Workshop for All Levels

Wednesday, April 12, 1:00 pm - 5:00 pm

(Hanover A, Exhibit Level)

Ticket: $30

Facilitators: Kathleen Powers Conti, Florida State University; Jacqueline Drayer, Mulberry History Advisors; Jackie Gonzales, Historical Research Associates, Inc.; Sarah Marsom, Heritage Resource Consultant; Morgen Young, Historical Research Associates, Inc.

Join members of the Consultants Committee for a two-part workshop focused on public history practice. The first portion will include discussion about marketing strategies, business structures, and accounting and legal topics—everything you need to know to get started in consulting and expand your business. The second session will be a roundtable format for experienced consultants to share advice, celebrate successes, and brainstorm challenges. All experience levels are invited to participate! Sponsored by NCPH's Consultants Committee.

W5. Why Here? Evaluating and Designing Place-Based Education Programs

Wednesday, April 12, 1:00 pm – 5:00 pm

(Hanover FG, Exhibit Level)

Ticket: FREE, but advance registration is required

Facilitators: Jason Harshman and LaQuanda Walters Cooper, National Endowment for the Humanities

Participants will discuss the intersection of public history and experiential learning opportunities offered by the National Endowment for the Humanities' (NEH's) Landmarks of American History and Culture grant program during this half-day dialogue and grant writing workshop. Framed by the questions, "Who speaks about experiences of place?" and "Why here?", NEH program staff invite participants to examine the challenges and opportunities associated with designing place-based learning activities and collaborate on how to broaden where these studies occur and whose perspectives they feature. The workshop provides an overview of the Landmarks grant program, tips for crafting a successful grant application, and a mock application feedback session.

W6. Can You Hear Me Now? Section 106 Consultation for Public Historians

Saturday, April 15, 10:00 am - 12:00 pm

(Piedmont, Atlanta Conference Level)

Ticket: $15

Facilitator: Jacqueline Drayer, Mulberry History Advisors

Local governments, tribes, nonprofits, and organizations are increasingly asked to comment on federal projects under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act. These activities may impact historic properties, but effective response is challenging. Local participation is critical to positive preservation outcomes, particularly in historically marginalized communities. Public historians can significantly influence this process. This workshop uses a collaborative approach to understand Section 106, benefits of participation, and response strategies. Following an introduction and case study, participants may share their own projects with the group. Participants will offer guidance and seek solutions. Those who prefer not to share or are new to the process will gain an introduction to Section 106 and new consultation strategies.

W7. From Project to Print: Academic Writing and Publishing for Public Historians

Saturday, April 15, 1:00 pm – 4:00 pm

(Piedmont, Atlanta Conference Level)

Ticket: $8

Facilitators: Teresa Barnett, UCLA; Nicole Belolan, Nicole Belolan Consulting; Sarah Case, Editor, The Public Historian

This workshop is directed at graduate students and public history practitioners who may have little experience with academic publishing but who are interested in writing for academic journals. It will focus on the genres of the book and media reviews, review essays, and particularly the notes from the field report, all of which can be less daunting than a full-fledged research article and can provide an entry point into publishing in the profession. The workshop will provide participants with tips for writing these genres, a place to develop their own ideas, and information on the process of submitting for publication.

POSTERS

The Poster Session and Reception will be held on Thursday, April 13, 1:00 pm – 3:00 pm on the Ballroom Level of the Hyatt Regency (set-up begins at 11:00 am). Poster presenters will be available to discuss their presentations, and refreshments will be served. For the first time, posters will remain set up in the Exhibit Hall and Exhibit Hall Foyer for the duration of the conference to allow more leisurely perusal of their contents and to accommodate those who may wish to avoid crowds. Co-sponsored by Duquesne University, Kristine Navarro-McElhane, and SolidLight Inc.

SESSIONS

S1. Building Your [Dot] Org: Doing Digital Public History with Black Craftspeople Digital Archive, Nashville Queer History, and Nashville Sites

(Hanover AB, Exhibit Level)

Public historians from Black Craftspeople Digital Archive, Nashville Queer History, and Nashville Sites present two toolkits for real-world community engagement projects, especially helping with digital public history work; one toolkit for the public historians wanting to improve their skills in shared authority, and one toolkit for community organizers who need help connecting with public history professionals and institutions. This session will include a live demonstration of how public historians and community organizations can use these toolkits to build trust, inclusivity, and long-term collaborative relationships.

Facilitator: Tiffany Momon, Black Craftspeople Digital Archive

Participants: Sarah Calise, Nashville Queer History
Torren Gatson, Black Craftspeople Digital Archive
Jessica Reeves, Nashville Sites
Kayleigh Whitman, Nashville Sites

S2. Public Narratives: Storytelling in Museums

(Hanover C, Exhibit Level)

Museums gather and share stories from multiple perspectives to present the complexity and contradiction of history and culture. In this roundtable, contributors to the book Storytelling in Museums (AAM Press, 2022) will discuss the ethics and efficacy of this practice. Panelists authored chapters about the Montpelier plantation descendants community, the Reher Center’s immigration stories, oral history and artifacts at the National September 11 Memorial & Museum, personal testimony in Holocaust museums, narratives of counterculture in New Mexico, interpretation at Oakland Cemetery, and queer narratives for family audiences. Our discussion will illuminate how museums tell stories and how story work catalyzes communities.

Facilitator: Adina Langer, Museum of History and Holocaust Education at Kennesaw State University

Participants: Elizabeth Chew, James Madison’s Montpelier
Mary Margaret Fernandez, Oakland Cemetery and National Trust for Historic Preservation
Judy Goldberg, StoryCenter
Sarah Gordon, Reher Center for Immigrant Culture and History
Margaret Middleton, Margaret Middleton Design
Patrice Preston-Grimes, University of Virginia
Meredith Schweitzer, Communications Consultant
Amy Weinstein, National September 11 Memorial & Museum

S3. Return to the Archive: Revisiting Method and Intention in Primary Source Research

(Hanover D, Exhibit Level)

The goal of this panel is to provide scenarios and a brief discussion about how we think about archival work and how it complements our methodologies and political commitments inside and outside of the formal classroom. Bringing together art historians, dance historians, public historians, and archivists, this panel interrogates how archives shape and are shaped by epistemic forms of power and violence.

Facilitator: Melissa DeVelvis, Augusta University

Participants: Patrice Green, Pennsylvania State University Libraries
Kirsten Pai Buick, University of New Mexico
Rumya Putcha, University of Georgia

THURSDAY, APRIL 13

S4. Opportunities and Challenges of the Undergraduate Public History Curriculum

(Hanover E, Exhibit Level)

In the last ten years, public history has revolutionized and democratized in its teaching with an expansion from graduate-level teaching to undergraduate programs. The proliferation of undergraduate public history programs is exciting, and with it comes opportunity, but there also are challenges as we adjust our teaching methods for undergraduate students. This session will address questions related to balancing theory vs. practice, collaborating with community partners, and professionalism at the undergraduate level. Bringing high-quality public history training to the undergraduate classroom can be challenging but it also is possible to produce professional projects and well-trained, theoretically-versed students.

Participants: Natalie Coté, George Washington University 🇺🇸
Jennifer Dickey, Kennesaw State University
Elyssa Ford, Northwest Missouri State University
Abigail Gautreau, Grand Valley State University

S5. A Balancing Act: Navigating the Field as Racialized Public Historians

(Hanover FG, Exhibit Level)

In this session, presenters will discuss some of the challenges involved in representing marginalized voices in public history projects while navigating our own identities as racialized early career public historians. Drawing on our work across national museums, not-for-profits, community organizing, publishing, and graduate studies, we will consider how the ideal of representing marginalized voices often involves complexity and compromise. Amidst these complexities, we still hope for a more sustainable and ethical future in public history. We welcome other racialized public historians and those interested in diversity and inclusion to join us as we work towards this future.

Facilitator: Emma Awe, Carleton University 🇺🇸
Participants: Emma Awe
Alexa Lepera, Carleton University
Valerie Kaiyang Wood, Ingenium - Canada's Museums of Science and Innovation

S6. Revisiting “Tenure, Promotion, and the Publicly Engaged Academic Historian”

(Regency V, Ballroom Level)

The NCPH Curriculum and Training document “Tenure, Promotion, and the Publicly Engaged Academic Historian” has been in use by history departments for over 13 years and is ready for a revision. This listening session is an opportunity for individuals to share their experiences with the document and to begin the conversation on new directions and philosophies that should guide the revision process. Even if you have never used the document, all perspectives are welcome.

S7. Developing an Interpreter’s Toolkit on Gender-based Violence in American History

(Learning Center, Ballroom Level)

With the America at 250 commemoration on the horizon, National Park Service (NPS) staff are developing resources for interpreting various areas of American history, including accounts of gender-based violence. Despite increased coverage of gendered violence in modern media, there are surprisingly few resources about the historical reality of gender-based violence and how to interpret those stories. This roundtable brings NPS historians and interpreters together to discuss NPS interpretation of gender and violence in history and to lead a dialogue with attendees about what resources we need to develop as a field to facilitate public discussions about gender-based violence in American history.

Facilitator: Kimberly Selinske, Death Valley National Park, National Park Service

Participants: Cassandra Anderson, George Washington Memorial Parkway, National Park Service
McKenzie Hitchcock, Death Valley National Park, National Park Service
Allison Horrocks, Blackstone River Valley National Historical Park, National Park Service

S8. “The Unmarked and Unremarked”: Interpreting the Neglected Spaces of the African American Freedom Struggle

(Hanover AB, Exhibit Level)

In emphasizing the importance of spaces that have been neglected from the established narratives of the African American freedom struggle, there is also an opportunity to use the interpretation of historic sites—especially short-lived spaces—to resist efforts to sanitize the Movement. This session will address how such spaces can be important to expanding upon the traditional discussion and teaching of the African American freedom struggle, going beyond the “canon” of figures, places, and events to recenter neglected places and people important to antiracist struggle.

Facilitators: Derek Alderman, University of Tennessee, Knoxville

Katrina Stack, University of Tennessee, Knoxville

Participants: Ethan Bottone, Northwest Missouri State University

Ari Green, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

T. DeWayne Moore, Prairie View A&M University

S9. The Process is the Product: Community Co-Creation for Reparative Change

(Hanover C, Exhibit Level)

Join the team from Mapping Prejudice for a hands-on session focused on the theory and practice of using digital tools to facilitate community co-creation of history. Mapping Prejudice mobilizes volunteers to transcribe racial covenants in communities across the state of Minnesota and the nation. By engaging thousands of community members in the creation of new geospatial datasets of these restrictions, the project seeks to answer long-standing research questions and build new awareness that will lead to reparative change. This session will be valuable for those who would like to incorporate Mapping Prejudice in their high school or college classes; those interested in understanding more about the theory, practice, and technical challenges of crowdsourcing the transcription of a large cache of digitized historical documents; and those who want to learn about the resources that Mapping Prejudice has for communities that would like to map covenants. Bring a laptop: we'll walk participants through the process of transcribing primary sources.

Facilitators and Presenters: Michael Corey, Mapping Prejudice, University of Minnesota Libraries
Kirsten Delegard, Mapping Prejudice, University of Minnesota Libraries
Rebecca Gillette, Mapping Prejudice, University of Minnesota Libraries

S10. Climate Refugee Stories: Charlotte Histories, Just Futures

(Hanover D, Exhibit Level)

This session features a presentation and discussion of Climate Refugee Stories: Charlotte Histories, Just Futures, a digital and physical exhibit created by UNC Charlotte's public history program and the Charlotte Teachers Institute in partnership with the Humanities Action Lab's Climates of Inequality project. Climate Refugee Stories features histories and voices of Charlotte residents and students who have experienced environmental racism and/or displacement, story maps, ephemera, K-12 curriculum, and student artwork. UNC Charlotte Director of Public History Tina Shull, students, and community participants discuss the exhibit's conception and creation using methods of critical refugee studies and participatory action research.

Facilitator: Tina Shull, University of North Carolina Charlotte

Participants: Willie Griffin, University of North Carolina Charlotte

Alyssa Martin, University of North Carolina Charlotte

Lynne McCauley Wiesecke, Abermarle Elementary School, Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools

S11. Stories that Matter: Engaging and Expanding Local Civil Rights History Through Pop-Up Exhibits and Teacher Trainings

(Hanover E, Exhibit Level)

This session, facilitated by the staff of the Center for Civil Rights History and Research at the University of South Carolina, brings together our community partners—teachers, activists, community leaders, and organizations—to discuss collecting, preserving, and promoting traditionally underrepresented voices in the history of the Civil Rights Movement. The session draws from the experiences of the Center's community partners to explain and envision how our model of community engagement can illuminate the fullness and complexity of South Carolina's Civil Rights Movement. It will also reflect on the process of building sustainable local and state-wide networks rooted in deep knowledge of the past.

Facilitators: Frank Gause and Rebekah Turnmire, Center for Civil Rights History and Research at the University of South Carolina

Participants: Melva Brown, Florence Public School District #3

Timothy Dargan, Lamar Commemorative Committee

Bobby Donaldson, University of South Carolina

Crissandra Elliott, Booker T. Washington High School Foundation

Jazmyne McCrae, Richland Northeast High School

S12. Teaching Collections and Teaching with Collections

(Hanover FG, Exhibit Level)

Eleven educators from across North America have come together to create a rapid-fire Pecha Kucha presentation on the benefits (and limits) of teaching with collections. Join us to learn directly from case study examples on material culture analysis, assignments and projects highlighting underrepresented groups, why and how to build a new teaching collection, and collaborations with museums and archives. In this fast-paced format, each seven-minute presentation will give you a sampling of ideas that you can use in your own teaching with collections to foster an inclusive, hands-on learning environment.

Facilitator: Wendy Soltz, Ball State University

Participants: Perky Beisel, Stephen F. Austin State University

Sheila Cavanagh and Clint Fluker, Emory University

Michelle Hamilton, University of Western Ontario

Rhonda L. Hinthner, Brandon University

Rebecca Hunt, University of Colorado

Jennifer Koslow, Florida State University

Akela Reason, University of Georgia

Stella Ress, University of Southern Indiana

S13. A Spark for Change: Developing a New Museum Manifesto

(Learning Center, Ballroom Level)

We have heard the cries across the arts and culture sector for changing the museum and how we record, curate, and share history. In this session, we are shifting from talking about change to thinking critically about how and where human-centered values can be the foundation of the new museum. Using critical race theory as a lens, we will go beyond talking about it and the recent controversies, but instead take the next step to use it as a foundational tool for public history and museums to collaboratively develop a manifesto for the new museum.

THURSDAY, APRIL 13

Participants: Camille Bethune-Brown, Independent Curator
Katie Clary, Carolina Coastal University
Kathleen Powers Conti, Florida State University
Kathryn McClurkin, Western Kentucky University
Autumn Smith, The National Center for Civil and Human Rights and the Historic Ebenezer Baptist Church
Sierra Van Ryck deGroot, Museum Hue

S14. Interpreting Slavery and Revolution: An Open Conversation About this Work

(Regency V, Ballroom Level)

This year, the National Council on Public History and the National Park Service have put together a suite of programs (including one prior to the conference and Wednesday's opening plenary) exploring the rhetoric of freedom at the founding of the United States and the conflict of those words and ideals with the institution of slavery and the forced labor that actually built the country. We hope those programs gave interpreters of slavery and of the American Revolution some context for their conversations with visitors. In this third piece, we offer historic interpreters who have fraught and important conversations with the public on these topics to stop by for informal conversation, venting, problem-solving, and more. Sponsored by the National Park Service.

Facilitators: Sylvea Hollis, Montgomery College
Yveline Alexis, Oberlin College
Ista Clarke, Charleston County Parks Department
Maya Davis, Riversdale House Museum
Marcus Nevius, University of Missouri

Future Visioning: A Collaborative Inquiry Activation with The Inclusionum

See full description in the "Special Events" section, p. 18.

(Hanover ABCDEFG, Exhibit Level)

Join The Inclusionum at NCPH 2023 for a participatory activation where we unpack where we are now after the last decade of seeking to understand the meaning of "inclusion" as a continually transforming word, concept, value, and set of practices. Today, the cultural and political landscape is ever-shifting. Memory, history, Truth, and heritage are all contested. As public heritage practitioners, what are we saying needs "to be determined" at this moment?

Using a decade of learning from The Inclusionum's collaborative digital platform (<https://inclusionum.com/>), join us as we name, illuminate, determine, embody, and assess the moment. We will play with, apply, and engage the critical questions and paradigms offered in the new book Transforming Inclusion in Museums (Rowman and Littlefield, 2022) as modes of visioning the future together and making "good trouble."

S15. "Wood Basket of the World": Lumbering, Manufacturing, and Conserving South Carolina's Forest

(Regency V, Ballroom Level)

While coal mines and textile mills are visible and memorable parts of Southern history, lumber, the South's largest industry, has remained virtually ignored, often written off as of little industrial consequence and little dramatic interest. Yet lumbering, more than any other industry, captures the full scope of economic change in the New South, its limitations as well as its impact. Now a group of graduate students, historians, archivists, and community partners are collaborating to develop a field of study focused on lumber, wood products, and forest conservation in South Carolina, topics ripe

S16. Exhibiting and Performing the Cold War

(Regency VI-VII, Ballroom Level)

For decades, the Cold War impacted or even dominated military, political, economic, and cultural developments in many countries across the globe. After the end of the Cold War, a rich and diversified memory culture of the Cold War developed in many parts of the world. This session will take a comparative look at how the Cold War has been and could be represented in museums and on stage, providing examples from Germany and the United States, two of the key “participants” in the Cold War.

Facilitator: James Deutsch, Smithsonian Center for Folklife and Cultural Heritage

Participants: Andreas Etges, University of Munich (LMU)

Anna Slafer, International Spy Museum

Irmgard Zündorf, Leibniz Center for Contemporary History

S17. Slavery and Freedom in Antebellum Savannah: Interpreting History Through Virtual Learning Experiences

(Learning Center, Ballroom Level)

Georgia Public Broadcasting Education’s latest virtual learning journey explores the complicated lives of those enslaved at the Owens-Thomas House & Slave Quarters in downtown Savannah, Georgia. Participants can examine primary documents, navigate the connections between agricultural systems and the urban economy, analyze the complex nature of relationships within a slaveholding family, assess the effect of innovations like the cotton gin, and much more. Through this free and open interactive resource, lifelong learners of all ages can explore the connections between the institution of slavery and the global economy; and discover what one city can teach us about society and culture before the Civil War through interactive elements like primary source letters and images, navigable maps, videos, and a virtual walking tour.

S18. Beyond Damron's Guide: Harnessing Memory and Archives for a More Inclusive LGBTQ+ History

(Hanover C, Exhibit Level)

Public history projects documenting LGBTQ+ spaces in cities often rely heavily on guidebooks, namely Damron's Guide, as the foundation for place-based research. When Historic Columbia launched the LGBTQ+ Columbia History Initiative in 2020, we did so with the understanding that these guidebooks had omitted many businesses, clubs, churches, and homes that were vital to underrepresented groups within an extremely diverse community. Hear project staff and community members discuss tools and strategies for identifying and engaging memory keepers in the history-making process and learn how to successfully document places that have largely disappeared from public memory.

Participants: Katharine Allen, Historic Columbia
Terrance Henderson, Artist
Ed Madden, University of South Carolina

S19. Public History and Challenging Topics: Centering Descendant Voices and Communities in Your Study of Slavery

(Hanover D, Exhibit Level)

This interactive roundtable discussion and presentation session will bring light to the best practices in conducting community oral history and archival projects dealing with slavery, slave descendants, and descendants of former enslavers. The panelists will discuss their individual and joint community projects to illuminate essential processes, issues faced, troubleshooting strategies, and effective management practices.

Participants: Jeanelle K. Hope, Prairie View A&M University
Marco Robinson, Ruth J. Simmons Center for Race and Justice, Prairie View A&M University

Rachel E. Winston, Texas Domestic Slave Trade Project and Black Diaspora Archivist, University of Texas at Austin

S20. Public History in Southeast Asia: Practicing the Past

(Hanover FG, Exhibit Level)

The world of public history in Southeast Asia is abundant, exciting, and not without controversy. Four examples are presented in this panel, each providing a glimpse at the public practice of history in the region. Two papers examine how monuments and historical parks portray the past in Thailand and Myanmar respectively. The remaining papers focus on the role and engagement of academic historians in public history in Singapore and the Philippines. Together, the presenters illustrate the dominant position of public history in Southeast Asia and the potential in and challenges towards reading expressions of the past through its intellectual lens.

Facilitator: Paul Ringel, High Point University

Participants: Maitrii Aung-Thwin, National University of Singapore

Maria Serena Diokno, University of the Philippines-Diliman
Chi Tim Ho, Singapore University of Social Sciences

S21. Cultural Emergency Response: Interpreting the Historical Context for Climate Change

(Learning Center, Ballroom Level)

As climate change's effects become increasingly apparent, more historic institutions are beginning to discuss the impacts on their sites, collections, and communities. But how can we offer the public historical context for how we got to this crisis point? And how can we support a way forward? In fact, historic places can provide hope and direction for the transitions essential to our survival today and can paint a picture of what mass mobilization and social transformation in crisis look like. Have you been considering ways to connect your site's story to the climate crisis? Join us to discuss examples from the US and UK, and for a discussion of strategies for approaching this topic with the public.

SESSIONS

S22. Getting Creative with Slavery and Resistance: Place-Based Learning and the Arts in K-12 with Freedom on the Move and The Hard History Project

(Hanover C, Exhibit Level)

Current debates over the teaching of slavery and “Critical Race Theory” demand innovation from public historians and K-12 educators, hinging on the use of primary sources to engage students from early grades through college. This session gathers participants from one pilot project: Freedom on the Move in New Orleans, a K-12 project using FOTM’s database of fugitive slave advertisements with place-based study and creative responses, to teach the history of slavery and resistance. It will spotlight classroom teachers, museum educators, historians, and students (represented by their creative work) who participated on the project, funded by the NHPRC in 2021-2022.

Facilitator: Kate Shuster, The Hard History Project

Participants: Cora Davis, Fayette County School District, Fayetteville, GA

Ahmariah Jackson, Atlanta Public Schools

Amber Mitchell, Whitney Plantation

Mary Niall Mitchell, Midlo Center and University of New Orleans

Jeff Payne, Homer Plessy Community School

Derek A. Rankins, New Orleans Charter Science and Math High School

S23. Moving Towards Transformative Justice: What a Policy on Discrimination and Harassment May Look Like for NCPH

(Hanover D, Exhibit Level)

In this session, some members of the NCPH board-led Subcommittee on Gender Discrimination and Sexual Harrassment (GDSH) provide a brief overview of their work since 2019, before moving into a structured conversation with an emphasis on a policy proposal for NCPH. The session will also include an opportunity for members to ask questions and see how they could be involved in the ongoing work of confronting discrimination and harassment in the public history community.

Facilitators: Kristen Baldwin Deathridge, GDSH co-chair, Appalachian State University

Iara Kelland, GDSH co-chair, University of Missouri - St Louis
Modupe Labode, Smithsonian National Museum of American History

Samantha Rosenthal, Roanoke College

Joan Zenzen, Independent Historian

S24. The Rosetta Circle

(Hanover E, Exhibit Level)

“The melodic ingenuity of the FOREMOTHERS is worth shouting about.” (Every Woman’s Blues, Rosetta Reitz)

The Rosetta Circle is an episodic audio-documentary and performance collective of care celebrating unsung foremothers of jazz and blues as archived by Rosetta Records. Feminist pioneer and jazz historian Rosetta Reitz created a record label dedicated to the women of early jazz and blues. Scouring music history for the foremothers that her male counterparts had overlooked, Reitz produced nineteen recordings and reissues of unsung, trailblazing women, numerous women-centered concerts, and a book manuscript profiling pioneering jazz and blues women. For the past two decades, this body of work—recordings of over sixty women along with Rosetta’s detailed papers and deeply researched writings—has sat in a university archive, largely unexplored.

Laura Michum, Sallie Bingham Center for Women’s History and Culture, Duke University

S25. Collecting and Reflecting in Times of Crisis

(Hanover FG, Exhibit Level)

How can historical institutions respond to crises like the COVID-19 pandemic? In this roundtable discussion, representatives of archives, museums, universities, and cultural institutions across the United States will share how they conceptualized their COVID-19-based collecting efforts, how their collecting has impacted their institutions and communities, and how they have (re)considered questions about rapid response collecting, the purpose of collecting “for the future,” and historical approaches to crises and disasters.

FRIDAY, APRIL 14

Facilitator: Ellen Noonan, New York University

Participants: Kami Ahrens, The Foxfire Museum

Leif Fredrickson, University of Montana

Erica Hague, Atlanta History Center

Greg Kocken, McIntyre Library, University of

Wisconsin-Eau Claire

Mark Tebeau, Arizona State University

S26. Monuments to Death or Life? Challenges and Changes in Interpreting White Settler Colonialism

(Learning Center, Ballroom Level)

This roundtable will feature an informal discussion about the relationship between settler colonialism and the built environment. Featuring scholars who study the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Trail of Tears, and the Daughters of Utah Pioneers, it will highlight the way that historic sites, especially those related to the settling of America, are at a crossroads. It will discuss how traditional interpretations have been challenged to center Indigenous perspectives. In line with the conference theme of “To Be Determined,” panelists and attendees are invited to contribute to this conversation about combating narratives of erasure at historic sites and monuments.

Facilitator: Sasha Coles, The Pennsylvania State University

Participants: Sean Jacobson, University of North Alabama

Emma John, University of California Santa Barbara

Megan Weiss, University of Utah

WG2. Processing, Interpreting, and Healing from Historical Trauma

(Hanover AB, Exhibit Level)

See description of the working group format, p. 20.

This working group will engage important and overlapping issues within the field of public history: the interpretation of events, people, movements, or places that may cause or recall historical traumas, and the impact that interpretation has on public history professionals, visitors, and collaborating community members. This conversation builds upon recent trends within our field that see public history practitioners pushed further into ever more complex topics of history and more sensitive forms of interpretation. Increasingly, public historians are asked to process, interpret, and live with historical traumas. As our field helps to envision a fuller and more complex vision of the past, we also have to equip ourselves with an ethic of care that will help us process the traumas of history.

WG3. World War II Home Front, Part Two

(Regency V, Ballroom Level)

Many National Park Service (NPS) and other historic sites tell stories of the American World War II home front, stories that include those of the new industrial workers who made wartime production possible, the building of the atomic bomb, and the Japanese American incarceration experience. As the home front experience passes out of living memory, what new opportunities open up for interpretation? What challenges could these new interpretive opportunities present for NPS and other historic sites? What interpretive techniques could help tell these expanded stories? As part of a suite of projects dedicated to the home front, NCPH invites you to join a diverse set of individuals coming from NPS sites, academic institutions, and other museum and interpretive professionals to discuss new opportunities for helping the public engage with these familiar and not-so-familiar stories. Sponsored by the National Park Service.

WG4. Five Year Combined BA/MA in Public History

(Hanover AB, Exhibit Level)

See description of the working group format, p. 20.

History departments at colleges and universities are beginning to consider whether a combined BA/MA in Public History might be a degree that would work well for their students and faculty. The combined BA/MA enables a student to graduate in five years. This working group will be led by faculty members whose departments have begun to offer this combined degree. We will explore how best to use this degree to train students in the field of public history. The working group is open to anyone interested in pursuing the establishment of a combined BA/MA degree at their own college or university.

WG5. Toward a Statement of Principles for Activist Public History

(Regency V, Ballroom Level)

This working group will develop a statement of principles and a set of best practices for activist public history projects. Activist, in this context, means projects intended to effect social change by focusing on the experiences of historically marginalized groups, contested histories, and the historical roots of contemporary inequalities. The planned statement and best practices will give practitioners, students, and educators well-considered guidelines to draw upon and refer to when carrying out potentially controversial, community-engaged work.

SESSIONS

S27. Homegoings in Print and Poem

(Hanover C, Exhibit Level)

In this session, panelists discuss how, as culturally distinct pieces of death material culture, funeral programs and eulogies engage the public in important discourse surrounding regional histories, social resistance, women's memory work, feminism, and memorialization all at the intersection of the Black experience. Each panelist will discuss how these two particular elements of the Homegoing—the last rites ritual imbued with African American cultural norms and practices—serve as important dialogic history where individual and communal Black life is made central, creating a space for critical questions to be asked of the public regarding social justice.

Facilitator: Michelle Pinkard, Tennessee State University
Participants: Cat Dang Ton, George Washington University
Kami Fletcher, Albright College
Myrna Roberts, Founder and Curator, Tatums Museum of Living History
Joseph Williams, Pennsylvania State University

S28. Hungry River, Chapter Two

(Hanover D, Exhibit Level)

Hungry River Collective is a community of archival care and ethical responsibility dedicated to building a family, community circle around an unexplored collection of century-old, carefully named and dated photographs from inside North Carolina's segregated asylum. Our work is a slow, loving, and question-driven journey to honor the people in the pictures and their stories. We seek community process as a prerequisite to access, memorialization, and meaning. How do we care for people who never gave consent but whose needs are not recognized in frameworks that center "legal" rights? In what ways does a focus on listening change approaches to archival stewardship? How can multi-institutional collaboration affect positive outcomes in archival and creative practices? We are a case study for a different kind of archival social practice: a multi-pronged approach built by genealogy, community engagement, and creative response—all of which strive to transcend simply cataloging photographs. The Hungry River Collective includes members from the State Archives of North Carolina, the Afro-American Historical & Genealogical Society, the Southern Historical Collection at UNC-Chapel Hill Libraries as well as the Franklin Humanities Institute at Duke University and the Dix Park Conservancy. Our primary hope is that our work as a collective of care provides structural foundations for gathering a meaningful family around this archive, as well as creative public art and memorialization outcomes. We hope also that our work models how continued collaboration between communities, archives, scholarship, and art can deepen our respective practices and strengthen our deep ties to each other's humanity.

S29. A Recent Graduate, In This Economy?: Finding Your Footing During Times of Uncertainty

(Hanover E, Exhibit Level)

So you have your degree. Now what? In this structured yet candid conversation, presenters will discuss their experiences navigating the professional world in the first five years after graduation. Topics will include job hunting, determining your next career move, navigating precarious employment including internships, contract work, and part-time jobs, wrestling with the sometimes at-odds values in academia and in the field, building necessary skills outside the classroom, and more. Participants will reflect on lessons learned from a broad range of backgrounds, including zoos, museums, libraries, historic farms, historical societies, and universities.

S30. Rethinking Black Museums in the Age of Black Lives Matter

(Hanover FG, Exhibit Level)

Considering their powerful grassroots, community engagement, and activist histories, how can we think about Black museums in the era of Black Lives Matter and in the age of a national Black museum? Is it possible to situate Black museums historically and uniquely 'in their own right' and not as 'past rehearsals' for a larger national museum? In the age of DEAI, where museums nationally and globally are being called to task for failing in areas that Black museums addressed more than 60 years ago, how do we recognize and advance the work that Black museums already have done in these areas?

S31. The Stagville Memorial Project: Creating Public Art to Uplift the Humanity of Enslaved Communities in Durham, North Carolina

(Learning Center, Ballroom Level)

A community-driven grassroots organization, the Stagville Memorial Project is on a mission to establish an impactful public art form in the downtown area of Durham, North Carolina. The envisioned art form is set to highlight the lesser known histories of the formerly enslaved people of Stagville Plantation. This session will bring together

Stagville descendants, project advisors, and other community leaders to share reflections on the successes and challenges of the project.

Participants: Georie Bryant, The Stagville Memorial Project

S32. Finding Virginia's Freetowns

(Hanover C, Exhibit Level)

Reconstruction-era settlements founded in rural areas by emancipated Black citizens provide a counter-narrative to the Great Migration, but these "freetowns" remain largely unexplored. This panel of ArcGIS specialists, public and cultural historians, preservationists, literary scholars, and descendants will use multi-media presentations to trace the different methodologies they used to document and commemorate freetowns; pose and answer questions about selecting the most appropriate storytelling and mapping tools, and strategies for organizing and integrating methodologies; and seek feedback from the audience on how best to engage and serve the public with these histories.

FRIDAY, APRIL 14

Facilitator: Lisa Goff, University of Virginia

Participants: Bill Backus, Prince William County Office of Historic Preservation
Tamika Carey, University of Virginia
Chris Gist, University of Virginia, Scholars' Lab
Amelia Hughes, Piedmont Environmental Council

S33. Crafting Accessibility: Creating a Multi-Pronged Approach in a Digital History Project

(Hanover D, Exhibit Level)

This session showcases three principal ways that the panelists—an accessibility consultant, film producer, web developer, and education designer—have come together to make their digital history project, Chicago Resettlement, more accessible through its film screening, web development, and curricular design. Chicago Resettlement utilizes cinematic storytelling to teach the history of Japanese Americans' resettlement in Chicago after their unjust incarceration during World War II. The team's stumbling blocks and investments in the project's accessibility make it an apt example for scholars, educators, advocates, and community members to learn about the process of building digital projects with a commitment to accessibility and inclusion.

S34. Where We Are and Are Not: Reflecting on Women's Public History

(Hanover E, Exhibit Level)

This roundtable explores themes of permanence and visibility for women's history in both research and the workplace. With the growth of public history as a field, women's historical contributions, the creation of women's history archives, and reparative practices that work to correct women's absence from the historical record and public landscape have gained greater recognition. However, overlapping professional, political, and historical concerns specific to women's history remain. Presenters will engage in dialogue guided by pre-circulated questions in each of these three areas. Our goal is to create an energizing conversation starter.

Facilitator: Leandra Zarnow, University of Houston

Participants: Fath Davis Ruffins, Smithsonian National Museum of American History
Heather Huyck, National Park Service and National Collaborative for Women's History Sites
Angela Tate, Smithsonian National Museum of African American History and Culture and Northwestern University

S35. Rule No 5: Voicing A Public Audio History of Library Work

(Hanover FG, Exhibit Level)

Rule N° 5 is an interactive audio experience that lives at the intersection of public history, critical librarianship, and installation art. This collaboration among library workers offers a sneak peek into the magical, mysterious, complicated, and controversial work happening inside the library—a place library visitors might not otherwise explore beyond the stacks. Join us for a live digital performance of this project, permanently installed in NYU's Bobst Library, which includes meticulously edited sound compositions that draw upon over fifty interviews with library workers, dozens of archival recordings, and original music, including crowdsourced and curated voice and sound art submissions.

Participants: Amanda Belantara, New York University
Ashley Maynor, New York University

S36. MuseumCU: The Role of Museums in the Larger Cinematic Universe

(Learning Center, Ballroom Level)

Museums are enjoying quite the moment in pop culture. Did you spot the Smithsonian in Wonder Woman 84? Are you still not over that museum scene in The Black Panther? Well, you're not alone. "MuseumCU: The Role of Museums in the Larger Cinematic Universe" analyzes the impact museums have on movies and television. The session will highlight a series of cultural cameos and discuss what each reveals about critical themes in museums: repatriation, labor, obfuscated histories, institutional legacies, and more. We will also explore how we might begin to cite museums and movies together as texts. Panelists will draw from their experience working in museums and public history to establish a dialogue between museums and popular culture.

Participants: Jessica BrodeFrank, Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences

Rebekah Bryer, Northwestern University

Sierra Van Ryck deGroot, Museum Hue

Lacey Wilson, Albany Institute of History and Art

WG6. Developing Partnerships and Teaching Cultural Heritage and Heritage Tourism in the University Classroom

(Hanover AB, Exhibit Level)

See description of the working group format, p. 20.

In this working group, we will explore how public history pedagogy has responded to the changing landscape of cultural heritage and heritage tourism during this late-pandemic/post-pandemic phase. As organizations reopen to the public and classrooms move back face-to-face, we are seeing lasting changes to pedagogy and community engagement. In this working group, we'll discuss how we have collaborated with partner organizations so students get meaningful

WG7. Decolonizing through Public History: An International Discussion

(Regency V, Ballroom Level)

Based on participatory framework and shared authority, public history, both locally and internationally, has the potential to challenge Western and colonial practices and understandings of the past. Inspired by discussions on cultural institutions (museums and archives), public space (colonial monuments), and power, the participants of the working group explore the needs, the meanings, and the different practices to decolonizing through public history. Topics include debates on who can interpret the past, where public history is performed and practiced, and how it can be mobilized for/ by under-represented communities. With case studies from different parts of the world, the group wants to contribute to a more inclusive and decentered international public history.

(Big Bethel AME Church, 220 Auburn Ave. NE)

Registration not required.

See full description in "Special Events" section, p. 19. Sponsored by Georgia Humanities.

This year's public plenary is a conversation between three influential and award-winning educators and activists whose work explores the meanings, interpretations, and spaces of the hip hop genre, which has shaped Atlanta indelibly since the Civil Rights Movement. Experts on the hip hop South Regina Bradley, author of Chronicling Stankonia (UNC Press, 2021), and Maurice Hobson, author of The Legend of the Black Mecca (UNC Press, 2017) are joined by architect and designer Michael Ford, founder of the Hip Hop Architecture Camp and recent architect of the Bronx Hip Hop Museum, to talk about the stamp hip hop leaves on cities like Atlanta, public interpretations of hip hop, and the role it can play in community-building and education.

S37. Imaging Caroline: Interpreting Freedom, Choice, and Enslavement

(Kennesaw, Atlanta Conference Level)

In 1863, Kentucky Governor Thomas Bramlette pardoned an enslaved woman, Caroline Dement, for the murder of a child. Our knowledge of Caroline is frustratingly incomplete. We know that she came to Louisville in 1862, was arrested and labelled a fugitive slave, remanded to a white family to await her Tennessee enslaver, and was later pardoned for a crime she did not commit. Yet the rest of her life remains obscure. This roundtable combines historical records and disciplined imagination to build potential interpretations of Caroline's life in order to frame a conversation about interpreting archivally marginalized individuals in public-facing programming and scholarship.

S38. Food and the Senses: Embodied Experiences as Public History

(Lenox, Atlanta Conference Level)

During the COVID-19 pandemic, social distancing, hard-to-hear-through masks, and the virus's own impact on taste and smell have had a significant psychological impact on recent movements to integrate sensory methods into public history. Now re-examining public history in the post-pandemic world, this session approaches the bodily senses as a medium for experiencing and understanding public history, including virtual reality and recipe reenactments. We aim to present case studies that will challenge our own boundaries of what public history is and how we tell histories of our communities. Our panel aims to ignite a conversation about the impact that COVID-19 has had on sensory methods of public history and how we can incorporate the senses into historical narratives that can inspire social responsibility and action in the future.

Participants: Peter Chesney, Independent Scholar
Kera Lovell, University of Utah, Asia Campus
Esther Martin, Boston University

S39. HBCUs and Transformative Potential for Public History

(Fairlie, Atlanta Conference Level)

This roundtable will focus on the ways that Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) offer a more transformative future for public history. Our programs not only promise to diversify the field, but they also place an emphasis on community engagement, reparative justice, and social discourse on race, gender, and class. Our programs promise to revolutionize more practical pedagogies and raise the historical consciousness of the field. Our graduates do not hesitate in making responsible decisions, which gives them the courage to speak truth to power and inspire creativity in their colleagues. The rise of professionalism and programs at Primarily White Institutions (PWIs) resulted in the entrenchment of polite racism and irresponsible practice, and HBCUs must provide an intellectual turn in the field.

S40. Meet, or Call In? Discussing the Future of Meetings and Conferences

(Inman, Atlanta Conference Level)

In 2019, members of the NCPH Committee for Environmental Sustainability drafted a report on ideas for reducing the carbon footprints of society meetings and conferences. The committee presented a copy of that report to the NCPH Board of Directors for comment. Then COVID-19 happened, and just like that meetings went online. Now, two years later, we are dipping our toes back into in-person events. In the intervening years, we all have become experts in all that is good and all that is unsatisfying about life in Zoom and Teams. But as we return to shared spaces, the same issues of carbon reduction that haunted meetings remain in place. What is the future of meetings large and small? How have two years of online meetings changed for better or worse how we see meetings and what we want them to be? How have our many activities as public historians changed, and what meeting environments most benefit our work? Please join us for a discussion about these issues of great importance to NCPH and all history professionals. Organized by NCPH's Committee on Environmental Sustainability.

WG8. American Girl Dolls and Public History

(Baker, Atlanta Conference Level)

See description of the working group format, p. 20.

This working group will grapple with the increased prominence of American Girl dolls (and the history they portray) through food studies, meme culture, the material culture of childhood, K-12 education, Civil Rights, queerness, and neurodiversity. We aim to explore the ways in which many librarians, educators, public historians, writers, and meme creators use the dolls to create and engage with public history for audiences who are more diverse, more online, and less likely to visit traditional historical sites than other audiences. We hope to develop this into public writing as well as an edited collection.

SATURDAY, APRIL 15

WG9. Lincoln Reimagined

(Regency V, Ballroom Level)

This working group follows up a two-day Lincoln Home Symposium hosted by NCPH, University of Illinois Springfield, and the Lincoln Home National Historic Site in October 2022. That event focused on the Lincoln Home National Historic Site, using the space as a learning lab to think more broadly about interpretation, preservation, and community engagement at a changing urban National Historic Site that seeks to be relevant to its community. Moving forward the work done at the Symposium by presenters and attendees alike, this working group brings together public historians who work at sites or on projects related to Abraham Lincoln, his time, and his legacy. We focus on the need to re-evaluate and revise approaches to 'great man history' in light of contemporary issues of diversity, equity, and relevance.

Facilitators: Devin Hunter, University of Illinois Springfield
Adam McNeil, Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey
Timothy Townsend, National Park Service

Discussants: David Bowlby, Motlow State Community College
Brian Burtka, Loyola University Chicago
Joan Cummins, President Lincoln's Cottage

WG10. Uniting Public History and End-of-Life Care

(Baker, Atlanta Conference Level)

See description of the working group format, p. 20.

This working group seeks to create a space for conversations between public historians and clinical workers about end-of-life care. Evidence suggests that there is real potential and need for public historians in end-of-life and elder care, to capture the oral histories of the aging and affirm their memories and to engage collections in ways that promote historical reflection and build community. How do we define this work? How do we go about laying groundwork for collaboration between health care workers, public historians, and oral historians? We aim to identify relevant scholarship, develop definitions that cross disciplines, and envision agendas for future work. We seek to connect professionals in the fields of aging, palliative and hospice work, and mental health with public and oral historians.

Facilitators: Marla Miller, University of Massachusetts Amherst
Sara Jane Ruggles, Auburn Crest Hospice-North Idaho

Discussants: Meral Agish, Queens Memory Project, Queens Public Library

Linda Barnickel, Nashville Public Library

Jennifer Coggins, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Yale University

WG11. Facilitating Difficult Conversations in an Age of Political Polarization

(Regency V, Ballroom Level)

Public historians play a crucial role in the ongoing reckoning with the legacies of slavery and colonialism in the United States. By confronting these troubling, often hidden or obscured aspects of the past, communities can begin to recognize the roots of present-day inequities and forge a better future for everyone. But how do we engage our communities in difficult conversations about the past without falling prey to the political polarization that so often shuts these conversations down? This working group will develop a case-study handbook of best practices for facilitating dialogue that welcomes multiple viewpoints, resists cancel culture, and fosters learning and growth.

Facilitator: Erin Battat, Wellesley College

Discussants: Rebecca Amato, Illinois Humanities

Alima Bucciantini, Archmere Academy

Hayley Goebel, University of Illinois Springfield and Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum

Jennifer Gunter, University of South Carolina

S41. State of the Field: Black Women’s Public History

(Kennesaw, Atlanta Conference Level)

Scholars of Black women’s public history will engage in a roundtable discussion about the past and present trends in the field. Panelists will discuss significant historical events and organizations, the impact of Mary McLeod Bethune’s new statue on Capitol Hill, and twenty-first century memorialization in the United States and abroad. As a celebration of the emerging scholarship in the field, the panel will highlight the often-overlooked contributions of Black women. Panelists will participate in an interactive conversation with each other and the audience to discuss how the past informs what is yet “to be determined” in the field.

Facilitator: Fath Davis Ruffins, National Museum of American History

Participants: Ashley Robertson Preston, Howard University
Alexandria Russell, Harvard University
Tara White, University of North Carolina Wilmington

S42. Good Faith or Good Publicity? Public History and Reclaiming Rejected Pasts

(Lenox, Atlanta Conference Level)

As historians work towards a more complete narrative of the past, institutions are making greater efforts to center and uplift populations they once rejected. Today’s communities are reclaiming groups their predecessors marginalized in museums, libraries, and on the monumental landscape. With a commitment to shared authority, the reintegration of these stories can empower formerly neglected communities. However, modern recognitions of past wrongdoing can also include expectations of monetary benefit or mending damaged reputations. This roundtable will discuss the ethical, unethical, and confounding methods of reclaiming formerly rejected peoples, and begin to formulate a critical lens for examining historical repair work.

Facilitator: Alaina Scapicchio, University of South Florida

Participants: Sarah Gutierrez, University of Georgia
Julia King, St. Mary’s College of Maryland
Selena Moon, Independent Scholar
Alena Pirok, Georgia Southern University
Alissa Roy, University of South Florida

S43. Race, Recreation, and the National Park Service in the mid-20th Century

(Fairlie, Atlanta Conference Level)

The National Park Service (NPS), though not always a willing actor, proved responsive to Civil Rights organizations’ pressure to provide more recreational opportunities for populations facing discrimination. In the 1930s and 1940s, National Parks in Virginia began to desegregate their facilities ahead of local custom. In the 1950s and early 1960s, the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission identified large racial disparities in access to public lands, prompting NPS to create new National Recreation Areas in urban areas. In the late 1960s, civil unrest accelerated NPS efforts to develop summer youth programs in the District of Columbia and elsewhere. This session illuminates what NPS did and did not do during these critical decades of the Black freedom struggle.

Facilitator: Taylor Brookins, National Park Service

Participants: David Glassberg, University of Massachusetts Amherst
Erin Krutko Devlin, University of Mary Washington
Noel Lopez, National Park Service

IUPUI

IUPUI Graduate Program in Public History

Established in 1984, the Graduate Program in Public History at Indiana University – Purdue University Indianapolis (IUPUI) trains historians in the research, analytical, and communications skills needed to apply their work in the public arena. Students benefit from a combination of classroom instruction and practical experiences that prepare them for a wide range of public history occupations. Campus adjacent to downtown Indianapolis, which serves as a learning laboratory for public history students.

Program highlights include:

- A nationally-recognized public history degree program, with opportunities for students to pursue additional qualifications and certifications in Library Science, Museum Studies, and Documentary Editing
- Two academic years of half-time paid internships in local institutions provide significant practical training (interns also receive a substantial tuition remission and health insurance)
- Situated near several long-time partner institutions and research repositories (including the Indiana Historical Society, Indiana State Library and Historical Bureau, and Eiteljorg Museum of American Indians and Western Art)

Graduate public history courses include: Digital Humanities, Historical Administration, Historic Preservation, Historic Site Interpretation, Introduction to Archival Practices, and Local and Community History
